7,000 Yanks Unloaded at Red Sea Port

A PORT ON THE RED SEA, Oct. 31.—(AP)—(Delayed)—(Passed by U. S. Military Censor)—The largest contingent of American fighting men ever brought to the Middle East in one transport, 7,000 strong, arrived at this port today and for hours were ferried ashore from their great liner-transport by boats.

The ship was crammed with specialists, technical troops and air force units from holds to top deck. Not a man was lost on the long voyage from New York. Colonel John E. Baird, of Providence, R. I., was in command.

In the course of the voyage the ship's medical staff performed eleven major operations and on at least one occasion they improvised instruments out of nails. All patients are recovering rapidly. One man who had a broken jaw now only has a black eye as evidence of his injury.

As fast as the troops reached shore, which was at the rate of about 1,000 per hour, they were loaded into trucks and driven through the sleeping town to camps pitched on the edge of the desert. Later they will be dispersed to stations throughout the mid-east.

There were no attacks from submarines on the trip over, Colonel Baird said.

"I'm damn glad it's over," declared Lieutenant David Porter, of the 101st Airborne Division.

King George Thanks Services For Decisive Desert Success

LONDON, Nov. 4.—(AP)—The text of King George's message to General Sir Harold Alexander, British Middle East commander, tonight follows:

The Eighth Army, magnificently supported by the RAF and units of the Royal Navy, has dealt the Axis a blow of which the importance cannot be exaggerated.

For the last fortnight we have all been following with anxious interest the progress of the hard-fought battle and I can assure all three services, embracing as they do many representatives of the British Commonwealth, and our allies, of the admiration and pride of the whole empire in their brilliant victory.

In the name of your fellow countrymen all the world over, I express to you, to Air Marshal Tedder, to General Montgomery, to Air Vice Marshal Cunningham and to the commanders and all ranks of the three services my thanks for the far-reaching success which by your untiring co-operation you have so decisively achieved.

Ejection of Rommel From Africa Forecast

Alan Moorehead, famous London Daily Express war correspondent who recently arrived in America from North Africa, where he had been stationed since the beginning of the war, here reveals the significance of the smashing desert victory just announced by the British Middle East command.

By ALAN MOOREHEAD:

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—(INS)—This is easily the biggest desert victory since General Wavell broke through to Benghazi nearly two years ago. It must result eventually in the Axis being thrown out of Egypt.

Even if he makes a brief stand in the four fortified boxes around Mersa Matruh, Marshal Rommel cannot hope now to form a permanent line very far east of Tobruk.

Judging from past battles I have seen in the African desert, I believe that already hundreds of enemy vehicles must be streaming westward past Sidi Barrani and up into Libya through Sollum and Halfaya passes.

General Montgomery has still at least 150 miles to go to the frontier of Libya. Everything now depends on the tanks—how quickly they are, how fast their fuel and ammunition are brought forward.

With two Nazi generals already knocked out of action, it is obvious that the Afrika Korps took the brunt of yesterday's tank clash.

Inevitably, many more prisoners will come into British hands during the present phase of the battle.

There were roughly 160,000 enemy troops in the El Alamein line, including about 60,000 Germans.

By the British get into El Daba (35 miles west of El Alamein) quickly, they will seize immense booty. All forward enemy supplies were distributed from there. More booty including grounded planes and shipping lies at Baush and Mersa Matruh, west of El Daba.

To me the greatest significance of the battle is the fact that our new British and United States heavy tanks have apparently mastered the German Mark 4's.

It's too early to judge, but it

600 Planes, 270 Guns, 260 Tanks Destroyed In 12-Day Onslaught

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

The British Eighth Army has won a victory of great magnitude in Egypt and the Axis enemy is in full, chaotic retreat—stripped of tanks, guns and planes by the many hundreds, leaving behind upwards of 9,000 prisoners and having lost two of its highest commanders.

That was the official and calmly triumphant word last night from British general headquarters in the Middle East, at the end of 12 full days of conflict.

"The Nile valley is saved," London military commentators added. "General Montgomery has accomplished his objective of smashing the enemy's military force."

Marshal Rommel's forces were officially declared in full and disordered retreat across the sands of western Egypt, pursued relentlessly by British imperial ground forces and under constant attack above by American and Allied airmen.

A special Allied communique said General Von Stumme, Nazi second in command, had been killed in the 12-day fight which preceded the flight of the "disordered columns," and 9,000 Axis prisoners had been taken, including General Ritter Von Thoma, commander of the Afrika Korps, and other topflight German and Italian officers.

Short Command.

General Von Thoma was said to have been captured only a short time after assuming his command upon the death of General Von Stumme.

The fighting in Russia was described by a Berlin radio announcer as of "local importance" compared with the ferocity of the African battle.

The joint communique announced these tremendous Axis losses in less than two weeks of battle: "Exceptionally high" casualties in dead and wounded; 600 planes; 270 tanks destroyed or captured; 270 guns and; 50,000 tons of shipping laden with supplies.

Allied air losses were described as "light," in the 12-day bloody breakthrough by which the British imperials hope to smash with finality the Axis position in Africa.

A Reuters dispatch said that the Italians had asked the British for a truce to enable them to bury their dead in Egypt.

The dispatch, from Cairo, did not say whether the request applied to the whole of the Italian forces on the Mediterranean-Qattara front.

(The victorious British communique was issued about the time the Berlin radio was acknowledging "British" local successes," but insisting that "Marshal Rommel has the situation completely in hand and is in position to take the initiative at any moment he considers necessary." The German announcer quoted "military quarters" as saying the British had lost between 450 and 500 tanks in the action thus far.)

Preparation.

The British drive westward climaxed days of artillery and aerial preparation which softened the Axis line, touched off an elaborate four-mile-deep mine field, and knocked out other fixed Nazi positions.

Imperial infantry did a heavy preliminary job before General Montgomery hurled his huge tank forces through a gap torn in the Axis coastal flank west of El Alamein. The same procedure was followed 40 miles to the south at the edge of the Qattara salt sinks in an effort to roll up the Nazi positions from both flanks.

Hundreds of Allied planes pounded the Axis supply lines as far back as the Libyan port of Tobruk, which was one of the main intake points for much-needed Axis supplies haphazardly ferried across the Mediterranean from Italy and Greece.

So superior was the advantage enjoyed by the Allies this time in the air, the communique said that 300 Axis planes were shot down in combat, and "a like number" destroyed or put out of action on the ground.

U. S. Airmen.

United States airmen played a major part in this sky artillery war, and their big bombers accounted for some of the 50,000 tons of shipping sunk along the Mediterranean coast behind the Axis forward lines.

Tonight these American and RAF fliers still were hacking at the tattered Axis infantry and the remnants of their armored forces streaking westward along the coast toward El Daba, 35 miles behind the punctured Alamein line.

Under the protection of this Allied sky artillery the British eighth

U.S. Land Force $4,000,000 at Stake On Guadalcanal Advances Again In Secret Textbook Scramble at Capitol

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Pushing the Japanese back, United States forces have made new gains along the beaches of Guadalcanal, diminishing the enemy's threat against vital Henderson air field, the Navy announced tonight.

In the drive toward the western end of the island where the Japanese had been most successful in effecting landings, the enemy has been forced to relinquish more than a score of pieces of equipment to the fighting Marines and Army troops.

Among the equipment captured were about 20 machine guns, the Navy said. This could mean that a number of enemy machine gun nests had been wiped out in fighting west of the air field. Also captured, the Navy reported, were two small artillery pieces taken from their Japanese crews.

Army and Navy planes joined in strafing the enemy and bombing Japanese positions, working in close support of the ground forces battling their way along the beach.

East of the airport, where Japanese reinforcements were reported to have landed Monday night and Tuesday morning, the Navy said there was no new action. Presumably those reinforcements had not swung into an attempt to pierce American defenses set up in anticipation of a Japanese attack.

The land battling took the Marines and soldiers toward two miles to the west with comparatively few casualties last Sunday, Washington time. They followed up the next day with several small advances in which enemy equipment was taken.

Returning to the attack the following day they continued to force the enemy westward.

The Naval engagements which roared through the ocean about the Solomon Islands for many days, apparently continued in a full. Or that phase, the Navy's communique said—only "there is nothing to report from other areas."

Behind barred doors and slammed transoms, the State Board of Education was locked for hours yesterday afternoon toying secretly with $4,000,000 in public funds—the long-awaited chance to hit the schoolbook jackpot.

Governor Talmadge, with the gleam of gold sparkling from his eyes, sat at the head of the table, directing the whispered conferences as to what schoolbook publisher would get how much.

Talmadge, himself, ordered the secret hearing.

This, he decided, would be more than a star chamber session—he even chased outdoors the public relations director of the State Board of Education in the apparent dread that his relations with the public were too widespread.

Outside in the lobby of the school department's offices, the bounds of the textbook publishing world were baying at the door. Newspapersmen balanced themselves on the hard marble floors in the corridor, shifting uneasily from one callous to another.

One newspaperman, after two hours of anxious waiting, poked his head in the door and asked: "Can we come in?"

Governor Talmadge grinned and said: "No—don't think you kin."

As the intruder stepped back out into the hall, the doorknob was fastened pointedly and then, the transom above was slammed shut.

The Governor then had his board where it couldn't get air.

Public Relations Director Luke Greene darted inside a moment later, but emerged just as hurriedly.

"Doctor Collins told me to stay in and Governor Talmadge told me to get out," said Greene.

Inside the room, Collins and a fair-sized group of the board members, according to reports, were battling the Governor and his cohorts on the irregular practices involved in the session.

The last contracts were signed in 1937 and they are operative for five years.

Talmadge, ably seconded by Mrs. William T. Healey, of Atlanta, his vice chairman, was fighting to have the board renew book contracts.

Atlantan Tells Of Bitter Fight To Halt Japs

By KEELER McCARTNEY.

After a year and a day of service with the United States Army Air Forces in the Philippines, Australia and New Guinea, twice-decorated Captain T. P. Talley, of Atlanta, was a bit shocked upon his arrival yesterday to find the "bound to win" spirit among the folks back home.

"Fighting men meeting the Japs every day have another way of putting it," explained the 22-year-old officer. "They say: 'We'd better win'."

Captain Talley enlisted in the Air Forces a short time after his graduation from Georgia Tech in June, 1940, and received flight training in Dallas, Texas, and at Randolph and Brooks Fields, Texas. He arrived in the Philippines November 20, 1941.

"We awoke December 8 at Fort McKinley to radio announcements of the attack upon Pearl Harbor," he said. "The next thing we knew the Japs had attacked Clark Field, 90 miles north of Manila.

"Our planes were coming through in a convoy behind us and for some reason they were routed to Australia instead of coming on in."

Captain Talley and a group of pilots set out in transports to fly back warplanes from Australia, but before the ships could be assembled.

Fund's Total Hits $417,554; Two Days Left

The Community Fund stood at approximately the two-thirds mark yesterday as workers, in the most enthusiastic meeting of the appeal, reported pledges of $129,829 to push the total raised to date to $417,554.

Major Meigs O. Frost, Marine intelligence officer for the southern states, who is taking an active part in the appeal, told the workers:

"Wear out shoe leather, and the Lord will be with you. He will pass the ammunition."

C. A. Stair, general appeal chairman, expressing gratitude at the splendid showing already made in the appeal, warned the volunteer workers that the next few days will tell the story.

"Since the start of this appeal, every indication has shown that we can be completely successful for the first time in 20 years. The response has been magnificent. But we cannot realize on this promise until every volunteer completes his individual assignment and continues the trend toward a higher scale of giving.

"We can succeed. I am pleading with you to make that promise come true."

Stair asked that every worker and every team captain stay on the job from now until Friday night, and obtain the maximum pledge from every prospective giver.

"Bring your completed report to the final report meeting tomorrow night, at 6:15 o'clock at the Athletic Club. If each of you

Two-Party System Revived With Vengeance in War Vote

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—(AP)—The two-party system, dealt a near knockout blow in the nation's great depression, revived with a vengeance today in the midst of global war.

The Republican party, after suffering such shattering reverses in the past decade that many asked whether it was on its way out, has surged back to take a prominent place at the nation's council tables. Indeed, its voice may be the determining factor on many issues, for it is foreseeable that sometimes the greatly increased G. O. Whatever the causes of this G. O. P. renaissance, however one may feel about it, there are three men who would be well-advised not to take any comfort from it. They are Hitler, Mussolini and Tojo.

Democrats Hold Bare Majority Of House Seats

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

The Democratic party elected a bare majority of the house in Tuesday's voting, but obviously fell short of anything resembling practical and dependable voting control of that branch of congress.

The broad and powerful Republican resurgence likewise left the party of Franklin D. Roosevelt facing many difficulties in the senate. The Democratic majority there was reduced to its lowest level since 1933.

House returns, almost complete, showed 218 Democrats elected, as against 205 Republicans. Eight contests had still to be reported. A majority of the house is 218.

Senate returns, added to hold-over members not up for reelection, gave the Democrats 56 senate seats, and the Republicans 38. Forty-nine is a majority. In the undecided senate race, Senator Murray, Montana Democrat, was running ahead.

Whatever the final congressional count, it was obvious that in time of war, the party of the administration faced a difficult problem—perhaps to all practical intents, rivaling that of 1918 when, despite the pleas of Woodrow Wilson, a

Farm Bloc Gains Strength as GOP Wins in Midwest

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Republican triumphs in the mid-western farm belt, attributed in part to farmer dissatisfaction with administration measures affecting agriculture, raised tonight the possibility of changes in war food production and price control policies.

Jury Expected To Get Huiet Case Today

Special Attorney Sums Up Case Chronologically for Over Hour.

A federal jury is expected today to begin its deliberations in the trial of State Labor Commissioner Ben T. Huiet, J. E. B. Stewart and Marion A. O'Connor, former labor department officials, on charges of conspiracy to violate the federal corrupt practices act with regard to a fund allegedly raised by departmental employees for Huiet's 1940 re-election campaign.

Arguments to the jury began yesterday following more than an hour devoted to a discussion of a motion for a directed verdict in favor of Huiet. Judge E. Marvin Underwood denied the motion, as he had previously overruled similar ones on behalf of the other defendants.

Summing up of the case began with an address by Ellis L. Arenson, special assistant to the attorney general, of Baltimore, who held the attention of the jury for more than an hour as he traced first the chronological order of events brought out in the testimony (particularly that of Stewart) which the government contends links O'Connor to the alleged conspiracy. Following that was an almost pedantic description of Huiet's activities, frequently illustrated by a number of the documents which the government has introduced into evidence.

In a highly dramatic vein, however, was the argument of H. A. Allen, attorney for Huiet, who, in a surprising move, told the jury he was willing to admit as true all the testimony of government witnesses regarding Huiet's knowledge of the fund's existence, but declared that he was unable to see how the commissioner's knowledge of the fund could possibly be construed to show that he entered into a "deep, dark conspiracy."

As a conclusion to his argument, Allen told the jury that "not Huiet alone, but the people of the state of Georgia," were on trial because they had re-elected the commissioner on Tuesday to a new four-year term. He was demanding acquittal of Huiet and the people of Georgia, when Judge Underwood severely reprimanded him for using "improper argument," and instructed the jury to disregard all his argument with respect to the dignity of the state's voters.

In today's session, Hal Lindsay, attorney for Stewart, will speak to the jury, as will Delacey Allen and John Wesley Weekes, who are representing O'Connor. United States Attorney J. Ellis Mundy will conclude the arguments for the government.

Maximum sentence for conspiracy is two years in federal prison and a fine not in excess of $10,000.

New Zealand is trying to stop hasty marriages and quick divorces of young people.

Significant gains in senate and house seats were made by Republicans in the great livestock, dairy, poultry and grain producing regions of the upper Ohio, Mississippi and Missouri rivers and the great plains—areas which in 1932 turned to the New Deal in displeasure at Republican farm policies.

Late election returns indicated that the congressional farm bloc—a group which President Roosevelt criticized severely in recent legislative battles over farm price controls—won new strength while the ranks of those who stood behind the administration were weakened.

The farm bloc has stood or continues to stand at odds with the administration on many as yet unsettled issues affecting agricultural production and price control. Those issues involve farm labor shortages, restrictions on the manufacture of farm machinery, gasoline and tire rationing and price ceilings on food products needed in expanding quantities for the war effort.

The mid-western farm vote may lead the administration to consider changing position on many of these issues. Plans of the Agriculture Department and the Office of Price Administration to use subsidies on an extensive scale to help meet farm labor shortages and to prevent upward revisions in farm price ceilings undoubtedly face a severe test. Many successful Republican candidates made an issue of such subsidies.

Further, the farm bloc finds itself in a much better position to demand administration rejection of its interpretation that the recently-enacted price control law allows farm conservation and parity payments to be taken into consideration in determining farm price ceilings. Under this interpretation ceilings may be placed at a lower level than would otherwise be the case.

This interpretation, which farm-state senators are criticizing as incorrect, was made by Senator Brown, Michigan Democrat, who managed the administration's price control measure. Brown went down to defeat.

The defeat of Senator Brown was accompanied by the loss of such administration stalwarts as Senator Lee, Oklahoma Democrat, Senator Herring, Democrat, who represented Iowa, home of Vice President Wallace, and the veteran Senator Norris, Nebraska Independent who had President Roosevelt's endorsement.

Each will be succeeded by men who have indicated opposition to many New Deal farm policies.

On the other hand, Democrats failed to unseat such farm bloc leaders as Republican Senators McNary, of Oregon; Capper, of Kansas; and Brooks, of Illinois. Returned to congress was Missouri's Representative Cannon, who, as chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee, has led many a house fight against administration farm programs.

Gaining re-election also were such southern farm bloc leaders as Senators Bankhead, Democrat, Alabama; Russell, Democrat, Georgia; and Ellender, Democrat, Louisiana.

Typical of many interpretations placed on the election outcome in the mid-west was that of Albert S. Gross, master of the National Grange.

"There was a feeling among

Accompanying the troops was a large contingent of Army nurses, and several engagements have already been announced.

"The girls were grand sports," declared Chief Nurse First Lieutenant Elsie Schwaebel, of Paterson, N. J. "We've had a wonderful reception wherever we have stopped."

"We had a swell time," said Margaret and Virginia Unruh, sisters, of Mobile, Ala. "But we did get tired of mutton."

"The ship didn't have all the comforts of home, but it's a lot better than we expected," added Marie Glock, of Mountville, Pa.

"Now we want to get to work," suggested Louette Booe, of Winston-Salem, N. C. "We sure do."

Ellen Moyeux, of Marksville, La., agreed.

Other nurses were Mildred F. Drenell, Hill, Pa.; Phyllis Igoo, Olds, Iowa; Katherine Fineash, Hazlehurst, Miss.; and Betty Hammond, Boston, Mass.

"Tell people at home it's lots of fun," they said.

Marines Plan Gigantic Cake For Birthday

3,500-Pound Creation To Be Sliced at Five Points.

Thirty-five hundred pounds of birthday cake will be waiting for Atlantans attending the Marine Corps' 167th anniversary celebration at Five Points when the nois-whistles blow November 10.

As far as anyone hereabouts knows, the cake will be the largest ever sliced here. It will be eight feet square at the base and seven and one-half feet high. Miniature Marines will stand guard at the top amid 167 burning candles two inches thick and eight inches tall.

So huge are proportions of the creation that it will be baked in four sections which will be assembled on a large truck for transportation to the scene of the party to which everyone is invited.

Officers will slice the cake with their pearl-handled sabers, reserving the top layers for a military ball Tuesday night at the Ansley hotel's Rainbow roof, where high civil and military authorities will honor the Marine Corps queen, chosen from a list of debutantes, secretaries, students and shopgirls submitted by Marines.

Ceremonies at Five Points, beginning at 11:45 o'clock with radio broadcasts and newsreel pictures, will include the cake slicing at noon and swearing in of the Elks platoon of Marine recruits.

looks as though we have built better tanks than the Germans at last with better 85 mm. guns.

On June 13th last we took just such a defeat in tanks as the Germans took yesterday. That means we are handling our tanks more ably.

The Italians have been keeping about four brigades around Mersa Matruh, one brigade at Sollum, and a division based at Tobruk. Most of the Nazis were at the front. There will be a frantic rush now to drag their 88-millimeter guns back to those places.

The soft sands end at El Alamein and there is good going over firm sand rocks from now on. Also there are fewer mines and emplaced guns. Another good thing for pursuit is that there is still a fairly long day and a rising moon.

English Victory.
This has been mainly an English victory. About three English infantry divisions and three English tank units are on the job. That is more Englishmen than there ever were before in the desert war.

The German generals blotted out of action by the British push, Von Thoma and Von Stumme, were recently moved into Africa with new reinforcements. It's believed that Von Stumme replaced General Nehring as first aide to Rommel and General Ravenstein, who was captured and has since been taken out of Egypt. Nehring is believed to have left the desert, probably for duty on the Russian front.

Last winter the commanders of the 15th and 21st panzer divisions were killed and buried on the battlefield near Derna and have since been replaced.

Marshal Rommel, General Kesselring and General Marx are the only senior commanders of the Afrika Korps now left. Some 40 Italian generals have been taken prisoner by the British.

Only 60,000 Marked Ballots In Entire State

Only about 60,000 voters, a fifth of those casting ballots in the September Democratic primary, went to the polls throughout the state Tuesday to ratify the nominees of that primary at the general election.

Independent candidates received only a small number of the total votes cast.

In Fulton county 8,821 persons voted against the 35,000 who voted in the primary. Fulton county gave only 260 votes to Henry A. Alexander, independent candidate for congress from the 5th district; 134 to D. Talmadge Bowers and 110 to J. N. Foreman, both independent candidates for Governor.

Although his name was not on the ballot, 136 Fulton county voters wrote in the name of Bond Almand, appointed superior court judge to succeed Judge John D. Humphries. Frank Hooper Jr., who was nominated for the judgeship by the State Democratic Committee and whose name appeared on the Fulton county ballot, received 6,756 votes.

Mrs. Levert Dwyer Shivers, of Norwood, independent candidate for United States senator opposing Richard B. Russell, received only 121 votes in Fulton county.

The only successful opposition to the Democratic nominees was in Fannin county, normally Republican, where State Representative Cecil G. Hartness, Republican, was re-elected over William Butt, Blue Ridge attorney, who was the Democratic nominee. The vote was 679 to 771. Republicans have held this seat for the past 30 years.

DeKalb county cast 2,237 votes for Ellis Arnall, the Democratic nominee for governor; 36 for Bowers, 12 for Foreman and 52 for Mrs. Shivers. Representative Robert Ramspeck received 2,191 votes in his home precinct, as against 98 for Henry A. Alexander, independent.

In Bibb county the votes were: Arnall 1,636, Foreman 7, Bowers 5, Russell 1,636 and Mrs. Shivers 9. Similar figures were reported by Chatham, Richmond, Muscogee and other counties with large populations.

2-Party Plan Is Revived in War Ballot

against the Axis until the war is won.

That theme was emphasized in post-election statements by the Republican party's last President and also by the man who, at the moment, is most discussed as its probable nominee in 1944.

Said Herbert Hoover: "Our enemies can get no comfort from this election. The platform of every single candidate—Republican, Democratic and Labor—was vigorous, efficient prosecution of the war. There was a strong element of protest in the vote. But it was the protest of insistence upon more effective organization of the war. And that can be no comfort for the enemy."

Dewey's Demand. Thomas E. Dewey, Governor-elect of New York, called on Americans to redouble the nation's efforts for a "total, uncompromising, crushing victory over our country's enemies."

Of course, it is easy to see how New Dealers are saddened by the result, just as Republicans were emotionally overwhelmed by the repeated New Deal victories that began in 1932. It is natural that a political figure, tasting the bitter brew of defeat instead of the heady draught of victory to which he has become accustomed, should feel that the world is coming to an end.

Thus elderly George W. Norris, Nebraska senator who has woven his name inextricably into the pages of American history, cries in something akin to agony that his defeat means "repudiation of 40 years of service," that "righteousness has been crucified."

But no one here, not even the most fervent foe of all that Norris stands for, expects sweeping repeal of New Deal enactments, any abrupt reversal of national policy. For one thing, the President has veto power over any measure passed by congress.

Norris was one of three candidates bearing public endorsement from President Roosevelt in yesterday's balloting. All were defeated, the others being John J.

HOME, OH BOY!—Captain T. P. Talley, of the Army Air Forces, shows his attractive wife where his squadron set out from in Australia to battle the Japs in New Guinea. The 22-year-old Atlantan arrived in the Philippines the day before the attack on Pearl Harbor and went from there to Australia and New Guinea. He is home on a two-week leave, awaiting a new assignment. He hopes to return to Australia.

Bennett Jr., Democratic candidate for New York governor, and Ferdinand Hoyt, Democratic opponent of Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York.

Incidentally, the election demonstrated anew how the constitutional machinery set up by the founding fathers often puts a brake on sudden swings from one political pole to another. Under the constitution, it was a mathematical impossibility for the Republicans to gain control of the senate yesterday, and of course the Presidency was not at stake at all.

House Situation. Only in the elections for the house could the groundswell of Republican resurgence register fully. Thus the expressed will of the voters is demonstrated, so that the nation's leaders may take note and govern their course accordingly—but the leadership is not actually overturned.

Reasons advanced for the Republican victories are many, and vary according to the lights of the reasoner. New Dealers say that it is the rule, rather than the exception, for the party in power to lose strength in the off-year elections. Some of them say, too, that the voters were restive under such necessary war measures as rationing and other restrictions.

The other side stresses that the result primarily was a protest vote against what it calls inefficiency in the war effort and bungling of some domestic issues. There are some, too, on both sides who say that the lack of any immediate great successes on the battle fronts had much to do with the result.

Too Early. It is too early to get any clear answers to the question whether the often-heard demands for greater unification of the military and naval high command will be satisfied, or whether more Republicans will be taken into the ranks of the President's civilian counselors. (Two Republicans already are in the cabinet—Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox.)

Some thought the election might be followed by swift action on manpower mobilization—there have been frequent demands for such measures as compulsory assignments of workers to jobs in war factories and steps to keep vitally needed agricultural workers on the farm.

The administration's approach to the farm problem appeared due for some searching re-examination. In general the farm bloc, which engaged in a notable fight with the administration on the issue of how high agricultural ceilings should be, gained strength in the balloting.

Brown Loses Out.

Senator Brown, Democrat, Michigan, senate sponsor of the bitterly fought interpretation that government subsidy payments to farmers should be considered in figuring ceilings on farm products, lost out in his re-election contest. The Agriculture Department's projects to use subsidies to remedy farm labor shortages and to prevent rises in price ceilings appeared due for more buffeting at the hands of farm legislators who say that is not the proper approach to the problem.

Of course, the new congress does not take office until January, and so the election's full effects will not become apparent immediately.

As for the long run, old-timers believe that the way things work out will depend upon the intangible human element. Much depends on whether Democrats and Republicans, traditionally at loggerheads, can put themselves into a unity harness and pull together.

Setup Is Changed.

No longer can the President suggest legislation in the expectation that it will be approved immediately without change. No longer can Republicans confine themselves exclusively to whacking New Deal heads right and left, for they now are in a position of new-found responsibility.

Most observers on both sides of the fence agree that co-operation, salted richly with constructive criticism, is the people's mandate as the nation bends all efforts to meet the cry: "Beat the Axis!"

Atlantan Tells Marine Comes Of Bitter Fight As Constitution Yells Help

sembled the Japanese had captured the refueling stations in the Dutch East Indies.

"For the next two months I piloted a dive bomber in attacks on the Japs in the Darwin and Java area," he said. "Our squadron got several ships in bombing and strafing attacks off Java."

"Then we got our big chance—an assignment to fly medium bombers back to the Philippines. We set out in April but the day before we arrived Bataan fell. So we picked up some of the pilots we had left behind and returned to Australia."

For this flight, the youthful captain was awarded the Silver Star. He also wears an oak leaf cluster in tantamount to a second silver star, awarded for a low level bombing attack on a Jap airfield in Lae, New Guinea.

The Japanese are poor aerial gunners and a bit leary of night flying, he says, but they are good at strafing fixed targets and are "excellent fliers." The famous Jap "Zero" is "a pretty good ship, with plenty of climbing speed and reaches—good ceiling," he added. "Usually the Japs try to attack a smaller group of planes than we do, but they'll fight if you get them cornered."

On his bombing tour that won the oak leaf cluster, Captain Talley said he did not know how many bombs struck the airfield. "A bunch of 'Zeros' jumped us and we didn't have time to look around very much."

Shooting Planes.

"It's the same way about shooting off attacking planes," he said. "You let one have a blast and see him drop away and then you have to train your gun on another. You can't see if the first one crashes."

"One Jap we didn't have any doubts about was a seaplane that attacked our formation as we were coming into the Philippines from Australia. Everyone in the squadron let him have it and his plane was blown to pieces."

Allied airmen were very much on the defensive when the Japs first moved into New Guinea, Captain Talley continued, adding: "We hugged clouds and stayed shy of their bases. It's a different story now."

Captain Talley piloted an attack bomber with Allied forces operating in New Guinea, strafing and bombing areas ahead of infantry attacks. "We shot up the areas the ground forces designated," he said. "You couldn't see anything except dense jungle, but our operations must have done plenty of good. At least that's what we were told."

Natives of New Guinea are friendly to Americans and are responsible for many airmen forced down in the jungles being able to reach home bases, he continued. Captain Talley described natives as "a little shorter than the average American, dark skins and pretty intelligent." A few are able to speak English.

He arrived in San Francisco Monday for a two or three weeks' leave. His mother, Mrs. Rose B. Talley, lives on the Marietta highway, near Atlanta.

BRITISH SHIP SUNK.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—(P)—The Navy announced today that a medium-sized British merchant vessel had been torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine in the middle of September in the Atlantic off the northern coast of South America. Survivors have been landed at an east coast port.

IF YOU HAD A SORE THROAT AS LONG AS THIS PELLOW AND HAD ALL THE WAY DOWN TONSILINE SHOULD QUICKLY RELIEVE IT

Allies Take 9,000 Axis Troops

army was continuing its advance. Although the extent of imperial ground gains was not stated in the communique, front dispatches said the imperials were beyond Sid Abd el Rahman, a coastal railway point 18 miles west of Alamein.

Thus the Nazi threat to the big British naval base at Alexandria had been removed by a distance of about 100 miles. British tanks henceforth will enjoy greater maneuverability in the desert now that the Alamein line has been shattered, but full advantage in this respect will not come until the Germans have been pushed as far west as Matruh, which is 75 miles beyond El Daba. The Qattara Depression in the desert to the south ends on a line drawn south from Matruh.

Enthusiasm. The British announcement was read out at headquarters in an enthusiastic atmosphere. It laid special emphasis on the full flight of the enemy under the relentless air attack and ground onslaught but there still was no hint from any quarter how many miles westward the British had moved.

The Allied airmen gave the retreating soldiers no rest or respite. Almost all traffic was on the coastal road, where the RAF reported the "carnage was heavy."

One pilot, who strafed the retreating enemy, said they had little or no chance to escape. One observer said the aerial action was a real act of punishment to the people who two and a half years ago taught the world the art of annihilating troops on overcrowded roads in France and the Low Countries.

Fresh Air Losses. Up to a late hour last night, it was reported 12 Axis planes had been shot down while only one Allied plane was lost.

One British squadron leader gave this description of the air action, in which flocks of planes came down to within a few hundred feet of the ground and swept tents and trucks with machinegun fire.

"Our objective was a retreating enemy transport on a road near Fuka. As we came in to drop the first stick, trucks careened madly off the road. It looked absolutely crazy. I saw one overturn and troops running away like cockroaches—collapsing, jumping head-first into patches of scrub or any hole they could find. We saw our bombs do plenty of good work."

Battlefield Scene. The area through which the imperial army now is pouring was reported strewn with the bodies of Axis dead and the burned out hulks of hundreds of enemy tanks knocked out in the big armored battle of Sunday night and Monday.

But far to the rear there also were similar scenes where the Allied airmen had done their punishing.

"I never saw such destruction," said Brigadier General A. C. Strickland, chief of the bomber command of the USAAF Middle East Unit, in telling of yesterday's attacks on fleeing Axis columns to the rear. General Strickland personally led the attacking U. S. bomber forces.

"We swept over the road and saw it packed with transport. But every vehicle was stopped and everywhere there were tiny trails of dust where the crews were running into the desert. Every bomber in our formation turned and sailed down the road, spilling its bombs on vehicles and men."

Joint Communique. The joint communique which disclosed the first detailed results of this third big British offensive in the desert said that the slain General von Stumme had been Field Marshal Rommel's stand-in whenever the latter made his periodic trips to Germany.

His death was an obvious hard blow to Axis leadership along with the capture of General Ritter Von Thoma and other senior Axis officers.

"The eighth army" of British Lieutenant General B. L. Montgomery "continues to advance," the communique added.

"Axis forces in the western desert, after 12 days and nights of ceaseless attacks by our land and air forces, now are in full retreat."

"Their disordered columns are being relentlessly attacked by our land forces and by Allied air forces day and night."

"General von Stumme, senior general who was said to have been in command during Rommel's absence in Germany, is known to have been killed."

"So far we captured over 9,000 prisoners, including General Ritter von Thoma, commander of the German Afrika Korps, and a number of other senior German and Italian officers."

"It is known the enemy's losses in killed and wounded have been exceptionally high. Up to date we have destroyed more than 260 German and Italian tanks and captured or destroyed at least 270 guns. The full toll of booty cannot be assessed at this stage of operation."

"In the course of these operations our air forces, whose losses have been light, have destroyed or damaged in air combat over 300 aircraft and destroyed or put out of action a like number on the ground."

"At sea our naval and air forces have sunk 50,000 tons and damaged as much again of shipping carrying Axis supplies to North Africa."

"The Eighth Army continues to advance."

MODERN AS UNCLE SAM'S LAND BATTLESHIPS

PLANNED PROGRESS HAS MADE ROCK ISLAND ONE OF AMERICA'S GREAT RAILROAD SYSTEMS

Today Rock Island is hauling millions of ton-miles of vital war freight every 24 hours. And we are equipped to carry even more! For Rock Island was prepared for war.

We were ready, because our program of Planned Progress, embracing expenditures of millions of dollars, has made Rock Island one of America's most modern railroads. That these were wise expenditures is clearly shown by our ability to rush unprecedented shipments of men and war materials to their destinations with maximum speed and efficiency.

During the past six years many important improvements have been effected to make Rock Island the great railroad it is today. Among them are...

ROCK ISLAND LINES
J. D. FARRINGTON, Chief Executive Officer
J. W. HILL, General Freight Traffic Manager
A. D. MARTIN, Passenger Traffic Manager

Buy War BONDS

DIESEL SWITCH ENGINES
which, due to their flexibility and ease of operation, have eliminated or reduced problems of vital shipping in classification yards.

"STREAMLINED" TRACK.
Mile after mile of curves have been eliminated or "eased"; heavier rails, ties and ballast have been used; grades have been reduced.

NEW EQUIPMENT has been added to rush vital war shipments to their destinations. When materials now on order are received, this efficiency will be further increased.

WARTIME TRAVEL—Because of troop movements and increased travel, we urge early ticket purchases and reservations. Cancel promptly if plans change.

WAVE Orders Handed Eight Atlanta Ensigns

All To Train in Communications at Smith College.

Eight Atlanta young women who have received ensign's commissions in the United States Naval Reserve have been ordered to report November 10 to Smith College for training in communications, administration and technical responsibilities. Lieutenant Mildred McFall, director of WAVE recruiting for the sixth naval district, announced yesterday.

A total of 20 women officers from this naval district will be included in the November class at Smith, she said. In the future, however, officer candidates will be enrolled as apprentice seamen for probationary training which will lead to officer commissions.

Women, 20 to 49, who can meet the physical requirements, are being accepted for classes which start each month. Those with children under 18 or with husbands in the armed services are not eligible. Lieutenant McFall said.

The Atlanta contingent included in the November class are: Ensigns Maud Alice Barnum, of 1376 West Peachtree street; Christine Elizabeth Beavers, of 1492 Ponce de Leon avenue; Barbara Anne Chandler, of 1450 West Peachtree street; Norma Tehrune, of 151 15th street, N. W.; Sybil Annette Grant, of 2684 Forrest way; Ida Nell McKinnon, of 3800 Tucker road; Mary Doreen McMahon, of 2200 Fairhaven circle, N. E., and Mary Alice Small, of 1839 Monroe drive, Northeast.

Full information on WAVE officer billets may be obtained from the Office of Naval Officer Procurement, Room 721, Healey building.

does that, we will really have something to shout about." Workers left the meeting in a spirit of determination to push the appeal to a successful conclusion. Today and tomorrow are the final working days of the intensive solicitation period.

The meeting yesterday was dedicated to the work of the public employees' division. Erie Cooke, chairman of the division, presided. "Our situation is very much like that of our fighting forces on the battlefield," he said. "The general staff has drawn up an excellent plan, and the artillery and the air force have laid down a barrage. Now, we workers are the shock troops moving up to win the heights and smash out victory."

"Atlanta is not going to be denied success this year, no more than our armies and navies are going to be denied victory."

Major Frost, one of the founders of the Community Chest, at New Orleans, has been in Atlanta with the Marine Corps.

"Since I have been here, I have learned a great deal about Atlanta," he said. "I have discovered the spirit of the city, and I know its heart."

"There is something alive in Atlanta today that is going to bring about success in this great undertaking."

"The spirit and the ability to give are here. The rest of it is luck and shoe leather. And about 98 per cent of it is shoe leather."

"If you workers who are here today, and all the others who are not here, will provide the shoe leather the luck will take care of itself."

Building Permits Drop in 1942

Value of new construction in Atlanta continued to drop in October as compared to the same month last year, although permits issued for the first 10 months of 1942 were about 70 per cent of those authorized last year, value of construction for the 1942 period was only about 44 per cent of the 1941 value, according to figures released by Wallace Screws, assistant city building inspector.

A total of 123 building permits were issued in October, 1942, having a construction value of $97,909 as compared to 311 permits in October, 1941, having a value of $425,694.

For the first 10 months of this year, 1,685 permits were issued ### for a construction total of $2,460,748 comparing with 2,423 permits valued at $5,587,268 for the same period last year. For the year 1941, 2,797 permits were issued with a construction value of $6,747,866.

NAZIS ISSUE CALL.

Huge U.S. Sugar Firm Is Charged With Peonage

TAMPA, Fla., Nov. 4.—(AP)—The vast United States Sugar Corporation, operator of plantations and refineries in the Florida Everglades, was accused today of holding Negro cane workers in peonage.

United States District Attorney Herbert S. Phillips announced federal grand jury indictments against the corporation, M. E. Von Mach, personnel manager of the company's plant at Clewiston; Evan Ward McLeod, superintendent at the Bear Beach Camp; Oliver Shephard, superintendent at the South Shore camp, and a superintendent named Neal at the Miami Locks camp.

Phillips reported that Negro workers, recruited in southern states and transported free to the sugar plantations, claimed they were notified on arrival that they were in debt to the company for the cost of their transportation. If they attempted to escape before discharging the debt, Phillips said they were apprehended and returned to the plantation.

Vice President Jay W. Moran quoted Otis E. Mulliken, chief of the labor section of the United States Department of Agriculture's sugar agency as testifying before a senate committee in 1940 that the sugar corporation's workers had a standard of living "higher than that of most of the agricultural workers in the continental area."

"On the whole," Moran said Mulliken continued, "sugar cane workers in Florida constitute a relatively privileged class of agricultural workers."

Russians Hold On 2 Fronts, Gain On Two Others

By HENRY C. CASSIDY.

MOSCOW, Thursday, Nov. 5.—(AP)—The Red Arm held its ground in Stalingrad and the central Caucasus Wednesday and scored successes on the Black Sea front and northwest of Stalingrad, the Soviet midnight communique said today.

The Germans continued to hurl masses of tanks into the battle on the Nalchik plains, at the foot of the 18,000-foot Caucasus mountains, and in the rubble-strewn streets of Stalingrad, but the Russians repulsed all attacks, inflicting heavy losses.

On the other two major fronts—northwest of Stalingrad and in the Black sea area—the Red army continued to hold the initiative and captured a number of German positions in both areas. The Germans were reported to have been forced to withdraw some of their elite troops from Stalingrad to meet the threat to their left flank northwest of the city after Red army riflemen, ferried by night across the Volga, entered the battle.

The communique said, however, that the Germans continued to attack all Soviet positions inside the Volga city with both tanks and infantry, indicating there had been no increase in the intensity of the fighting. It said 1,000 Germans were killed and eight tanks disabled during the day, without any gains in ground.

Strengthened by the reinforcements, Russian troops northwest of Stalingrad captured five dugouts and fortified positions, while Soviet artillery demolished nine blockhouses. About 130 Germans were killed in this area, the communique said.

In the central Caucasus area, where the Germans are trying desperately to reach the historic Georgian military highway, main artery across the lofty mountain barrier, the Russians claimed to have repulsed all attacks in the big battle southeast of Nalchik.

At one point Soviet troops killed 350 Germans and set seven tanks on fire, the communique said, while at another place 16 German tanks were set on fire and an additional 17 disabled.

On the Black sea front, one Russian unit was said to have captured "several enemy strong defense points" northeast of Tuapse and killed about 400 Germans. To the east of Novorossiysk, German-occupied Black sea port, a group of Russian scouts penetrated behind enemy lines and raided the headquarters of a German unit, killing 27 men, including a battalion commander and a company commander.

Inside Stalingrad a new flareup of German attacks by perhaps 30,000 infantry was stopped without gain in a six-hour struggle, Russian dispatches said. They declared that ground won back in the factory belt by Russian thrusts was held successfully against counterattacks.

Red Star said Russian landings on the German flank north of the city were made by troops who crossed the Volga on armed cutters and marched through the night into positions from which they attacked the German rear.

The battle there continued after dark, the Army newspaper said, with heavy losses inflicted upon the Germans.

Dispatches from the central Caucasus front, where the Germans have sent tanks, planes and a field army of 50,000 men into attack toward the high passes through the mountains, said the Germans had been held in a merger, gain yesterday southeast of Nalchik.

A Russian communique indicated that this latest Nazi onset had faltered finally under Russian artillery fire after several days of gains.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON—Fred D. Melton, 18, a junior at the University of Georgia, enlisted in the United States Army at Fort McPherson yesterday. His father, Quimby Melton, publisher of The Griffin Daily News, resigned as city editor of The Constitution to enlist in the Army at Fort McPherson in 1917 and served overseas.

Chotas, Whiteman Hearing Delayed

City Recorder A. W. Callaway yesterday checked until next Wednesday a hearing for two Atlantans charged with "drunk-disorderly conduct" in connection with the general election Tuesday.

Police reports showed Patrolmen Jim Gavin and M. H. Key went to the Sixth Street Pharmacy at Peachtree and Sixth streets to investigate reports that voters could not get inside to vote.

The police said Tom Chotas, owner of the pharmacy, and Louis Whiteman, of a Boulevard address, were inside fighting and that an improvised dice table was found in the rear of the building.

Three million school children have been protected against diphtheria in Great Britain.

Like Father, Young Melton Joins Army

Couldn't Stand Civilian Life With Others Doing Bit, He Says.

Declaring "I just couldn't stand it in civilian life while the other fellows were out there doing their part," Fred D. Melton, 18, a junior at the University of Georgia, cast aside his books yesterday to don the garb of a United States fighting man.

Young Melton was inducted into the army at Fort McPherson. Just 25 years ago, his father, Quimby Melton, now publisher of The Griffin Daily News, resigned as city editor of The Constitution to enlist in the Army at Fort McPherson.

Publisher Melton not only gave his consent for his son to enter the armed forces, but said:

"I'm proud of him and proud of the fact he entered the services of his country at the same place I took the oath in 1917." Fred, a first sergeant in the ROTC at Athens, could have completed his studies at the university without fear of being drafted. But "I just couldn't stand to keep on staying out when the other fellows were in there doing their part," he said.

Publisher Melton saw service overseas with the famed 82d "Rainbow" division during World War I.

Another son, Quimby Jr., is a cadet major and senior at the university. He will graduate December 19 and report to an officer candidate training school.

Fred attended Griffin High school and Baylor Military school at Chattanooga, where he played center on the Mid-South prep championship team. Eddie Prokop, a star on the present Tech gridiron squad, played on the Baylor team with young Melton.

Leaving Baylor, Fred attended The Citadel for a year and then entered the University of Georgia. He was one of the first 18-year-old enlisted reserve students to ask for active service.

Democrats Hold Bare House Majority

Republican house was elected. Past issues—particularly in the domestic field—have found numerous conservative Democrats, particularly from the south, deserting the administration. Such defections have been sufficiently numerous in the past to create on many ballots a grave problem for the Democrats. This problem, obviously was multiplied by Tuesday's voting.

Unsettled Senate. The same situation has existed in the senate, and was intensified there likewise by the election. With three senate contests still unsettled, the Democratic numerical excess over the Republicans has been reduced from 36 to 20 with three contests still undecided. Republicans led in two of the latter.

Elections to governorships found the Republican tide running strongly, too. Out of 33 contests they elected 16 governors to 12 for the Democrats and one for the Progressive party. The Democrats were leading in three and trailing in one of four undecided contests. They ousted Democratic governors in New York, Connecticut, California and Michigan, but lost a gubernatorial chair themselves in Wisconsin, where Progressive O. S. Loomis defeated Republican Governor Julius S. Heil.

The New York election, won by Thomas E. Dewey, Republican, raised the victor's 1944 presidential nomination prospects to a new high. He won by big figures—nearly 600,000. And in winning, he defeated the candidate backed by President Roosevelt, John J. Bennett.

Last Hope Lost. New York Democrats' last hope of keeping a hand in the state's administration after 20 years of rule faded out as late returns last night apparently elected Thomas W. Wallace, Republican lieutenant governor.

State Democratic Chairman James A. Farley, who obtained Bennett's nomination over President Roosevelt's preference, United States Senator James M. Mead, let it be known, however, that the defeat would not make him relinquish his party leadership. He pointed out his term extends to April, 1944, and said his efforts "will be directed toward building the organization to its fullest possible strength for the campaigns that are to come."

F. D. R. Men Beaten. Mr. Roosevelt had endorsed two candidates in Tuesday's election and had given a negative endorsement to a third. All three were beaten.

In addition to Bennett, he backed the veteran Independent Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, the dean of congress, with a distinguished legislative career behind him. Norris lost to Kenneth Wherry, middlewestern Republican party manager.

Mr. Roosevelt also had announced he would vote against Representative Hamilton Fish, Republican, house member from the President's home district, who opposed virtually all New Deal domestic legislation and was a bitter pre-Pearl Harbor isolationist.

Fish won. A surprising upset came from Oklahoma. Defeated there was Senator Josh Lee, Democrat, ordained Baptist minister, former education teacher, formidable campaigner and champion of the recent proposal to forbid the sale of alcoholic beverages in the vicinity of Army camps. He lost to E. H. Moore, Tulsa oil man, once an anti-New Deal Democrat, who ran as a Republican.

Hammer-Tong Race. Another usually powerful Democratic campaigner, M. M. Neely, was beaten in West Virginia. He resigned from the senate two years ago to run successfully for Governor. Special political factors in West Virginia were the reason. The home situation "straightened out," he turned from his uncompleted term as Governor this year to try a return to the senate. Chapman Revercomb, Republican, beat him.

A hammer-and-tongs campaign for the senate seat from Illinois went to the Republican incumbent, C. Wayland Brooks. He defeated Raymond S. McKeough, Democrat, by a comfortable margin. McKeough had stressed Brooks' pre-war isolationism.

The feminine contingent in the house received a new recruit in Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, noted as a beauty, a socialite, playwright, author and traveler.

In California Will Rogers Jr., soldier-son of the late humorist, unseated Leland Ford, incumbent Republican representative in the 16th congressional district. The Democratic nominee, at the primary, young Rogers is a Beverly Hills publisher now stationed at Camp Hood, near Temple, Texas.

Five More Seats. The GOP gained five U. S. house seats in Connecticut and one in Massachusetts. New England Republicans re-lected two senate incumbents, Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., Massachusetts, and Styles Bridges, New Hampshire. Rhode Island Democrats returned Theodore Francis Green to the senate.

Only in Rhode Island did the Democrats hold their own. Besides re-electing Green, Rhode Island Democrats returned J. Howard McGrath to the governorship for a second term and retained control of two congressional seats.

Democratic Senator Prentiss M. Brown, of Michigan, one of President Roosevelt's most trusted lieutenants in the upper house of congress, was defeated by graft-busting Circuit Judge Homer Ferguson, Detroit Republican.

Michigan Republicans picked up one congressional seat in the balloting. Representative Frank Hook fell before Republican John B. Bennett.

Brooks Elected. Republicans in Illinois re-elected Senator Wayland, who was termed as a pre-war isolationist, by a 200,000 plurality over Representative Raymond S. McKeough, a Democrat who has given unwavering support to the Roosevelt administration.

Republicans, who will lose one seat in congress-at-large through re-apportionment, gained four of Illinois' congressional seats. Meanwhile, down south, Representative Andrew Jackson May, Democrat, Kentucky, chairman of the important House Military Affairs Committee, won re-election, unofficial returns showed.

Earlier the election of Kentucky's Senator Albert B. Chandler for a full six-year term had been conceded by his Republican opponent, Richard J. Colbert, of Lexington.

Texas perfunctorily voted all their high Democratic officials back into office. Senator W. Lee O'Daniel, Governor Coke Stevenson and 20 of 21 Texans in the national house of representatives were certain of victory. The other representative, Nat Patton, apparently had only to await confirmation of similar victories.

Future Is Bright, Says Dr. Jones

Undiscouraged by a world swept by war and increasing signs of racial strife, Dr. M. Ashby Jones, retired Baptist preacher, said yesterday in an interview:

"I think we have the brightest hope we've ever had for liberty and justice and brotherhood. The millennium won't come with military victory, but it will have been revealed more vividly than ever through the realization of the interdependence of all people."

Dr. Jones will be presented a citation by the National Conference of Christians and Jews November 23. The citation is in recognition of his endeavors promoting understanding and good-will among Catholics, Protestants and Jews.

tracts that according to practice and custom, are not supposed to be renewed until next March.

Across the street, in his state capitol offices, Governor-elect Ellis Arnall sat smilingly and refused to comment on the business going on inside the Education Department.

"I won't take office until January," said Arnall, but his smile indicated that the schoolbook publishers who became parties to this deal, faced loss of their coveted market.

The books that might be contracted for by the Board of Education at the present time will not be used in Georgia schools until after September, 1943. The schools of Georgia are overstocked with books today, according to Dr. M. D. Collins, state superintendent. "We are able now to buy whatever books we need whenever we want them at the old contract price," said Dr. Collins. "The new contract means we shall have to pay more money for them."

But Talmadge, in full command at the head of the table, drove relentlessly ahead.

Arguments Arise.

Arguments arose within the board room as to the advisability of making a star chamber session of the meeting and, late in the afternoon, the Governor ordered newspapermen admitted.

Only one was left in the hallway to take advantage of the delayed invitation—the other—five of 'em—had folded their tents. Group by group, the Professional Textbook Brokers were being herded into the room to make their report on just what books should be bought. The "professionals" are school teachers and school superintendents who already have collected $6,527 for 30 days' work at scanning the offerings of the publishers. Each reports on a subject on which he is alleged to be an expert.

As each subcommittee of professional readers was ushered into the room, the Talmadge-Healey presence, the schoolbook salesman outside leaned and swayed and pulled for the jackpot. The readers tugged at their lapels and strove for a scholarly air.

More than three dozen salesmen were gathered in the hallway, eager for the $4,000,000 distribution.

Salesmen Scatter.

Photographers tried twice to take a picture of the salesmen, but they sped silently away when they scented cameras pointing in their direction.

Strangers had to elbow and battle their way into the entrance of the state capitol building, where the salesmen were crowded. "What's all this crowd," yelled a newsboy, "I thought the Arnall jobholders weren't supposed to be here until January."

As Talmadge fought the Collins' arguments, he was borrowing cigars from Collins.

The Talmadge crowd sparred for

Book Browser Resents Being 'Called Names'

"Browse v. intransitive. To read passages here and there in a book or collection of books."

"Browser, noun. A person who browses."

And so, the Talmadge-appointed professional textbook readers were referred to in a story yesterday as browsers.

"What do you mean?" demanded an elderly woman outside the Board of Education offices yesterday, when she saw the reporter.

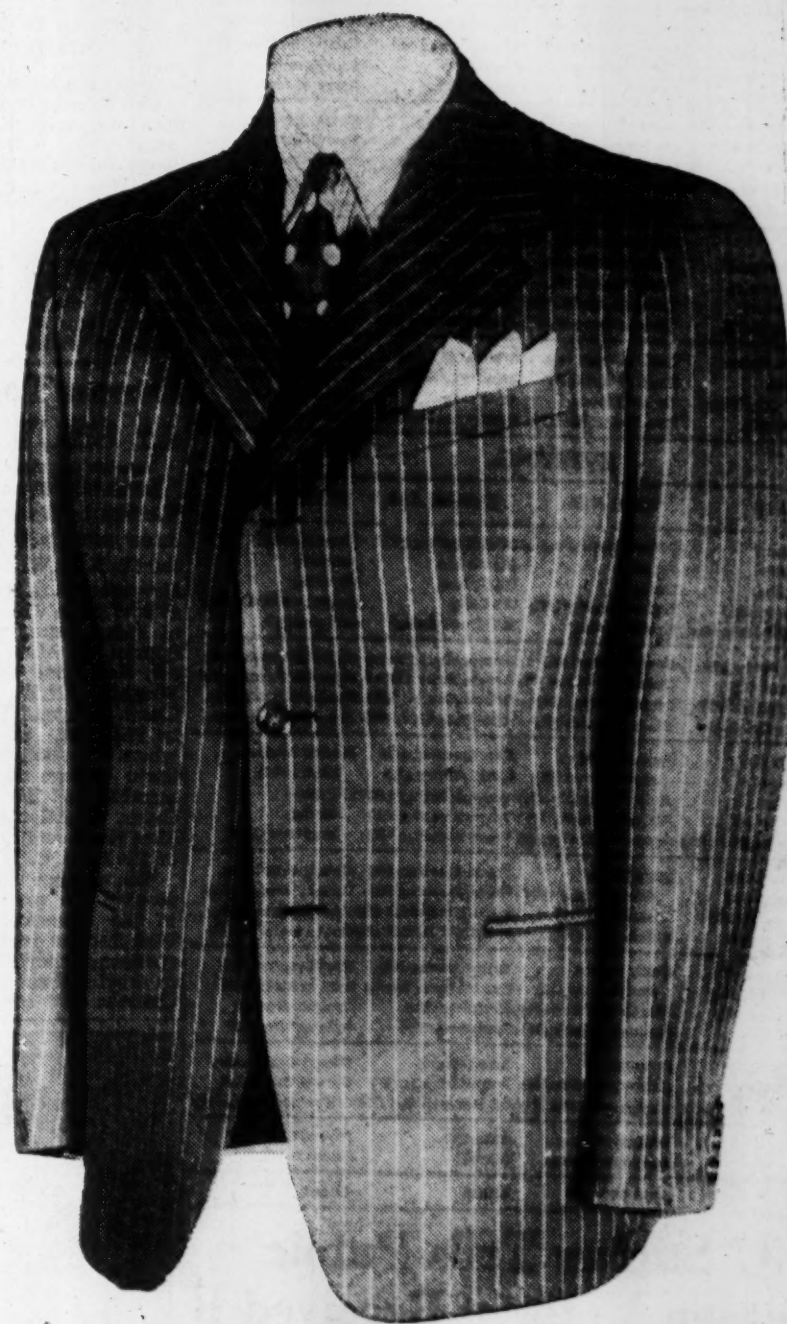

"What do you mean—calling me a browser? Who are you—to be judging me in print like that?"

"You quit calling me bad names like that in print—or I'll attend to you."

And then she went in to collect her $300 and some-odd dollars for her work as a judge of what Georgia school children should read.

COLD, WET DAYS AHEAD

THE Taxicab shortage will be felt more during the next few months.

Professional people and many businesses have moved out from the center of town, and are harder to reach. You could walk from one to another when they were in the center.

But on the "rim" they are widely apart.

The common carrier, do not follow the rim—so the trip will be longer.

When it is cold and wet, many of these trips would be impossible except in motor-cars. And if your own car is tied up by thin tires and vanishing coupons you must fall back on taxicabs.

But Taxicabs are scarce, too.

You must help us plan to make the Yellow fleet do more per mile of travel. You must let us know ahead of time whenever possible, so we can arrange for an outgoing trip and an in-coming trip to be handled by the same cab.

From now on when you know you will need a cab, phone Walnut 0200 and let the Dispatching Switchboard plan ahead, and be ready when it comes.

We must all co-operate to make every mile a useful mile.

New 'C' Sticker Tells Public Reason Motorist Received It

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—(AP)—The new "C" gasoline ration sticker will tell the public just why the motorist received it—whether he gets more than 470 miles of occupational driving a month for being a doctor, nurse, farm worker, essential war worker, etc.

Purposes for which "C" ratings are permitted will be listed on each sticker, and local ration boards will place a check mark beside the purpose for which each sticker was granted. Motorists, in turn, must display a sticker for the most liberal type of ration book allowed them.

Eastern motorists already having "C" stickers which do not show the reason they were given will not have to get new ones at this time.

The Office of Price Administration said purposes for which "C" cards may be issued include: Official government or Red Cross business; school official traveling from school to school; transportation of four or more persons to school; transportation of United States mail; wholesale newspaper delivery; carrying newsreel photographic equipment; physicians, surgeons or veterinarians; public health nurses or internists; embalmer; minister, priest or rabbi; transportation of farm workers, marine workers, or farm materials; essential hospital, utility or war worker; labor conciliation; recruiting and training of workers; construction, repair and maintenance services or production specialists; members of armed forces to duty; telegraph delivery; essential scrap agents.

Farmers Urged To Hold Cotton For Price Rise

Senator Bankhead Says $10 Bale Increase Is Possible.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 4.—

(AP)—Senator Bankhead urged southern farmers today to hold cotton off the market for a price rise of approximately $10 per bale, an increase he said is entirely possible under present price ceilings on cotton goods.

The farm bloc leader quoted the statement here last week by Leon Henderson, administrator of the Office of Price Administration, that present ceilings on cotton goods would be left unchanged, as the basis for his statement that an increase in the price of spot cotton to 22 cents per pound, or $110 a bale, is possible.

Henderson, in a statement last week, said no price ceiling was in prospect for raw cotton.

"The price for cotton may go as high as 22 cents at the spot markets, or 21.47 cents at local markets," Bankhead said, if farmers "would hold enough cotton off the market and let the cotton trade know it could not get the cotton until it was ready to pay that price."

Spot cotton has been selling for approximately 19 cents per pound in recent weeks.

Cotton mills, Bankhead said, "can pay more than that price (21.47 cents in local markets), according to the OPA and still make a profit."

The Alabama senator said "the next cotton crop for many reasons will be smaller than this year's crop and the amount of cotton needed for next year's consumption will not be less but may be more than will be consumed this year."

Bankhead estimated the addition of approximately 2,000,000 bales to the cotton surplus this year, bringing the total surplus to 12,000,000 bales. In urging that cotton acreage "be substantially reduced" next year, he said "it is highly important to the farmers" to reduce the surplus to 6,000,000 bales. He recommended a maximum production of hogs, beef cattle, poultry and eggs, milk and butter, vegetables and fruits as their contribution to the war effort.

Annapolis On Horizon For 'Jackie'

BOSTON, Nov. 4.—(AP)—As his first official act on being elected to congress, former Governor James M. Curley today asked President Roosevelt to make arrangements for the future appointment to Annapolis of Little Jackie Shea, five-year-old son of Commander John Shea, who was reported missing after sinking of the carrier Wasp.

A touching letter by the commander to his son, published after Shea was listed as missing, gained nationwide attention.

Curley's telegram to the President said: "The appointment to Annapolis when of age of the son of Commander Shea of the Wasp... would be most worthy recognition of a truly great American."

Shea was a resident of North Cambridge, a part of the district in which Curley was elected.

6 Fire Victims Are Buried in Single Grave

No Date Set for Preliminary Hearing in Farm-Home Burning.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. CHATSWORTH, Ga., Nov. 4.—Solemn rites today marked the burial in a single grave of the six victims of the farm-home fire near here early Monday morning.

Funeral services for Mrs. Mark Pulliam and five of her children, who were burned to death in the blaze, were held this afternoon at Sumach Presbyterian church, about 10 miles northwest of here. Interment was in the church cemetery.

The service was attended by a large congregation.

There were no further developments here today in the fatal burning of the mother and five of her eight children Monday. Three children who spent the night at the home of their grandparents escaped the blaze.

The husband and father, Mark Pulliam, is held in Fulton county jail in Atlanta, charged with murder, following the probe of a coroner's jury into the fire. He denies the charge he is involved in the fatal fire. At Dalton, a woman listed as Della Mae Hall, a former resident of Chatsworth, is being held as the movements of Pulliam over the weekend are being probed. Pulliam was arrested at a sawmill near Dalton where he had been working several months.

Date for a commitment hearing for Pulliam has not been set here.

Candidates Chosen for Queen Of Seminary 'Scrap Carnival'

By SALLY FORTH.

THE JUNIORS at Washington Seminary are planning a "scrap carnival" as their function for the year, the novel affair to be held at the Seminary on Saturday evening, November 14. The proceeds will go to the Army and Navy Relief Fund, and excitement is running high over the choice of the carnival queen. You see, the voting for the queen is on a monetary basis, and the candidate piling up the greatest amount of money is elected.

Candidates were chosen by popular vote of the juniors this week and resulted in Teresa Tidmore, Margaret Boyd, Jean Fraser and Peggy Sheffield being named in the competition. Each candidate has selected a manager for her campaign—just like regular politicians. Teresa's manager is Jean Henson, Peggy is Helen Walkley, Margaret has chosen Mathilde Turner, and Jean's is Frances Massey.

But to get back to the "scrap" motif, for the carnival, the juniors decided that, owing to the stress of wartime, they would not buy a single thing for the decorations, but would use "scrap" which afterward could be turned to good account in the defense effort. Consequently, the study hall where the event will be held will be ingeniously adorned with such things as funny papers, pocket mirrors, old victrola records, and bottles, all of which are needed in some phase of the war effort. After the crowning of the queen, the Seminary seniors will present a fashion revue in compliment to the successful candidate, the show to be followed by a dance in the gymnasium. Each class, of course, will man a booth and sell food and drinks to swell the funds for Army and Navy Relief. There will be popcorn, peanuts, candy and soft drinks for sale, and you may be sure the true carnival spirit will prevail.

Arrangements for the affair are in the capable hands of Teresa Tidmore, junior class president. She will be assisted by Miss Ruth Draper, teacher of dramatics and class sponsor, and the other class officers, who include Peggy Sheffield, vice president; Mary Humphries, secretary; Jane Campbell, treasurer, and Rennie Hodgson, Red Cross representative.

If you are a concert fan, and find, at the last moment, that you cannot use your tickets to any of the season's presentations, why not arrange to donate them to a soldier? Mrs. Legare Davis, who is on duty at the Service Men's Center, appeals to music lovers not to let their unused tickets go begging this winter. Soldiers who cannot afford tickets are eager to attend the performance. If you wish to be especially patriotic, why not buy a couple of tickets and present them to service men? Arrangements may be made with Mrs. Davis by phoning Wa. 4208.

WHEN Mrs. Frank McGaughey and Mrs. Alex Smith leave today for the east they will have two very definite aims in view. The first, of course, will be to see their sons, Frank Jr. and Alex Jr., who are students at Holy Cross College in Worcester, Mass. These two young Atlantans have been rooming together since their prep school days and have continued their association during college days.

Their mothers decided that a trip to visit them would be an appropriate fall vacation, but before returning home they expect to spend a few days shopping and attending the new Broadway plays in New York. Which is the second definite aim of the trip.

TOMORROW night is a date for the younger set to chalk up in red letters THAT BIG. The occasion is the Pi Phi sorority's annual script dance, which will be held from 9 to 1 o'clock at Garber Hall. The freshman members, following a custom of many years, will be attired in the attractive costumes of French maids. And during intermission they will amuse the guests by being "put through their paces" as a part of the penalty they must pay for being freshmen. The costumes, incidentally, are symbolic of the "service" required of them by the senior members. Betty Greve is president of the sorority and she will be escorted to the dance by John Marshall Bickert. The other officers and their dates include Mathilde Turner, vice president, with Clyde Carver; Frances Massey, secretary, with Wesley Moran, and Jean Fraser, treasurer, with Jimmy Black.

IF YOU would like to combine patriotism with fun, make plans at once to attend the benefit bridge party to be given tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock by the Debutante Club. Because ALL PROCEEDS from the party will be donated to the Army-Navy Relief Fund, the debutante charity for the year, this generous contribution being made possible because the debutantes encountered NO EXPENSE in the planning of the party.

The affair will take place in Rich's tearoom, and will feature a program fraught with interesting entertainment. Twenty-five handsome prizes have been contributed by local merchants and will be awarded to guests.

A friend of the club, who prefers to remain anonymous, has promised an orchid to the girl selling the largest number of tickets to the bridge party, an inducement which has inspired the buds to sell tickets like mad! Thus far, Virginia Boynton, Laura Shallenburger, Frances Woodruff, Nancy Johnson and Helen Taulman are in the lead, each having sold an impressive number of tickets.

Virginia has offered to mail tickets to patrons who are unable to secure them from Rich's or from a member of the Debutante Club. Her address is 2855 Peachtree road, N. E.

Present will be Misses Margaret Hopkins, Elizabeth Bowden, Patsy Sparks and Mesdames Charles Campbell, Pierre Howard, Ralph Howard, J. W. Reid, McKenzie

East Atlanta Unit.

Brooks has been appointed as official hostess for the sale of the poppies.

Williams, Richard Ulery and Charles Mabry.

Miss Austin will share honors with her fiancé on Saturday evening at the party at which Malcolm Keiser will be host at the regular Saturday evening dance at Druid Hills Golf Club.

Class To Present Mrs. J. R. B. Branch

Mrs. J. R. B. Branch, of Macon, will lecture on her experiences in China at 7:30 o'clock Friday evening in the main Sunday school room at St. Mark Methodist church. Mrs. Branch and her family were residents of the Orient for 27 years previous to her return to the States.

In announcing Mrs. Branch's appearance here, Mrs. O. C. Hancock, chairman of the social service group of the class taught by Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, said: "Proceeds from the event will be disbursed with the regular charitable funds of the class."

Tickets are available through Mrs. Henry L. Reid, Hemlock 0038, or may be obtained at the door Friday evening.

How To Protect Your Baby From Allergy

By Ida Jean Kain.

If you are allergic and you are going to have a baby, the time to do something about his allergy is now. You may be able to keep him from getting it. Certainly, it is worth while to try.

In a recent article in Hygeia Magazine, you are warned not to give in to a craving for any particular dish. Eating too much of a food may cause the child to develop a sensitivity to it. You should avoid an excessive amount of such foods as chocolate, nuts and eggs, which are the common trouble makers. Any expectant mother should be careful to get all the protective foods, but this is especially important when an allergy runs in the family.

And if you nurse the baby later, you will still have to be careful of your diet. You will have to stay away from any of the foods that have brought on digestive upsets, rashes or any other discomfort.

When you start giving the baby other foods like eggs try him out on just a tiny bit of the yolk to see how he reacts. It may be all right in his diet. Then you can gradually increase the amount until he gets the whole egg yolk.

You are advised to watch out for dust in the nursery and to use cotton blankets and clothing for him rather than woolen or silk. The floor covering should be hard surfaced and easily washed. He doesn't use a pillow, so you won't have to bother about that. But when he gets older, have him sleep on a cotton or kapok pillow, rather than one filled with feathers. A feather pillow should be covered with some nonallergic cloth.

Even his pets must be selected with care. Some cases of chronic bronchitis and asthma show marked reactions to dog and cat hair. (So, no hair mattresses.) Instead of cuddly pets, he may have to learn to appreciate goldfish and turtles. That seems like a poor trade, but it is better than letting him risk developing an allergy.

As he grows older, encourage him to take up games in which he is not subjected to dust. These will be more to his benefit than sandlot games.

A marked dislike for a food—unless, of course, it's spinach—may mean it doesn't agree with him. Don't force him to eat it. The allergic reactions to look out for are vomiting, diarrhea and skin rashes.

Being allergic yourself, you don't have to be sold on possible prevention for the baby. These measures may keep him from having the same trouble.

Wife Can Use Flattery To Improve Man's Looks

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie: I am a 25-year-old married woman and have been married for eight years. My husband works at a public job and makes a good salary, but he drinks a great deal. On weekends when he gets off from work, he starts on a bender and never considers the fact that I am at home alone without any groceries. He never comes home in any condition to take me to town to get anything. What can I do about it? How can I get him to come home on Saturday? He never thinks of nice clothes for himself or for me. I want to get a job but he does not want me to as yet. He will not buy me any clothes. Do you think I should get a job? How can I get a job? How can I get him interested in his own clothes and the way he looks?

DOWN HEARTED. I would suggest that you get yourself a job as soon as possible. And buy yourself some clothes. Under the existing circumstances I see no reason to respect his wishes regarding your job. I do not see that he is contributing any to your support and he is certainly not trying to do his part. It is not a very dignified thing to do, but I think that the only possible way you will be for you to meet him as soon as he receives his check and get your share for the household expenses. There is no reason in the world for you to be inconvenienced because of his failure to provide the necessary funds. It is a pity that a wife should have to use such tactics but I do not think you have any alternative. He expects you to sit at home and wait on him and that is one reason he is showing you no consideration. Don't always be on hand when he comes in. Let him have a few inconveniences and see how he takes them. Getting yourself a job and regaining your self confidence in yourself is very important. But what is more important is that you do not assume all the responsibilities of support.

As for getting him to dress better, this involves a bit of clever talk on your part for you will have to flatter him into wearing certain clothes telling him that this or that is "just his type."

HOW TO MEET TEASING WITH GOOD HUMOR

Dear Dixie: I love him very much, and I believe he loves me. We have never had a date, but in meeting and talking I can tell by his actions. He has asked me for a date to go to the fair one night. Two other couples are to go along. I am of the timid type and don't like to be teased and every one will tease me about him. Should I go with him, or just flatly refuse? Also how can I show that I really like him?

By all means go to the fair and if any of the crowd starts teasing you, tease right back at them and never for one minute let them see that what they say has any effect whatsoever upon you. Timid people always have the crowd against them, but a good thing to remember is that no one is better than you and some are not half as good. Keep that in your mind when you start out, and if anyone starts making fun at you, tell them in a good humored way that you are so glad that you provide them with so much to talk about and that you are flattered beyond words.

You can show that you like him, by letting him know that you enjoy being with him. Tell him so. It will be alright. Tell him that you were so glad that he invited you and that you hope it is just the beginning of many more good times.

Ann Sothern Warns Women To Stay Feminine Despite the Job

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 4.—Dear

Harold Heffernan: I hope you are having a wonderful time back east with your four gallons of gasoline, but, if it is any comfort to you, we are all in the same driver's seat.

Things have certainly changed since the day we met in the farmer's market and you registered surprise at the fact that I was doing all of my own marketing. That's not all I'm doing. I'd be willing to compare prices with any housewife of your acquaintance, or take up the matter of monthly budgets, or discuss victory gardens, or sound off on the most efficient matter of running a house. Just ask me anything.

But all joking aside, the women of today are really learning the meaning of being independent. We're not all so sure that we like it, but it is our job. Up until now we women have been more or less kidding ourselves about equal rights and privileges. Certainly we thought we were completely self-sufficient but, in the back of our minds was always the comforting thought that, if we did get in too deep, we could turn to some man for advice.

That was in the "good old days" before December 7. Now our brothers, fathers, husbands, sweethearts and sons are all in it, and we're in it, too. We are faced with sacrifices on every side. We must do things that we've never done before and, surprisingly enough, some of us are going to discover that it's good for us. Of course, there is always the feminine danger of being completely carried away with ourselves and our activities. Certainly it is all right to wear uniforms when engaged in actual service. But if a girl values her standing with the boy friends, she won't be caught dead in one of duty.

Surveys and polls conducted in and out of the armed services prove the fact that while the men may consider themselves handsome and irresistible in uniform, they frown upon the idea of girls usurping this last stronghold of masculine fashion. They want women to be feminine. So in your columns, please tell the girls to be feminine, be feminine... even if it means adding a powder puff to their tool kits. Girls will make the greatest mistake of their lives if they trade their natural birthright for a bit of gold braid and a pair of shoulder-boards.

I've heard you, and other men, too, expressing the futility of women ever successfully managing to get along together. Well, let's face it. Women have to get along together now. And is that really so bad? Personally, I don't feel that it is. The old competitive spirit is rapidly disappearing. Women usually vied with each other over two things, boy friends and jobs. Well, the boy friends are all in the service, which leaves plenty of jobs for everyone, so why compete? In addition, there just isn't going to be time for petty jealousies. Women will be so busy learning the intricate mechanisms of power drills, electric blow torches, assembly lines, and time clocks that they will be quite content to just go home and collapse.

Women may not be aware of it, but this might turn out to be a blessing in disguise. No bridge—no gossip. No gossip—no frowns. No frowns—and we'll save our faces. It is going to be a definite shock to some women to look in the mirror after a hard day's work and discover how it agrees with them.

It is a well-known fact that girls who have been in the business world stay younger than the socially minded group with nothing but time on their hands. This is due to the fact that the necessity of keeping an alert mind is reflected in their faces. Today we all have the same chance. Now watch us go.

Sincerely,
ANN SOTHERN.

MRS. ETHEL CUMMINGS, OF RICHMOND, VA. Mrs. Cummings is national president of United Spanish War Veterans' Auxiliary, and will make her official visit to the Georgia Department today and tomorrow in Savannah. She is the wife of George W. Cummings, past commander of the Department of Virginia, United States War Veterans, and was a member of Company A of the Tennessee Regiment during the Spanish-American War.

MY DAY: Visit to American Paratroopers

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

LONDON, Tuesday.—On Sunday I saw a good many of our troops. We arrived at camp in time to go to 11 o'clock church service. The church was filled.

Directly afterwards we visited the kitchens, where the men's food was being prepared, saw their mess hall and visited some of their barracks. Each unit had a little fireplace at the end and in the evenings they have an open fire to crowd around so they can be warm before they turn in. They manage to keep everything extraordinarily clean, which is a real achievement.

After lunch with the commanding general, who keeps to the nice custom of saying grace before meals, we visited a hospital. There were very few serious cases of illness, mainly motor vehicle accidents or accidental gunshot wounds. Many had colds that were more or less serious, but all of them seemed to be getting well.

I was amused by one boy, a quick-tempered southerner, who was suffering from the results of a fight. He insisted he "had to do it." Another boy with a patch over his eye said, "My friend threw a hot coal at me."

We went next to the American Red Cross Canteen, run by Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr. It was crowded, some Army talent doing very well with a Sunday afternoon musical entertainment. They have a very good building which they opened without any equipment. They are only just beginning to get the things they need to run it smoothly. There is no other place for the boys to go near by, so the movies, dances and "eats" offered by the Red Cross are very much appreciated.

We reached our final destination at 6:30 and Miss Thompson and I spent the night with Queen Mary in the country. It was a very pleasant visit and both the Queen and the Princess Royal were very kind and helpful in talking to me about the work of the women and the things they thought it might be useful for me to study.

Monday morning we left at 9:30, visited our paratroops, saw a demonstration of their equipment, their marching and training. They are a grand, adventurous group of boys.

During the day I saw my old friends, Sir Arthur and Lady Willert, and their granddaughter, who is my godchild.

GEORGE RECTOR SAYS— "SURE, WE'LL SHARE THE MEAT"

They Must Have Meat

Our fighting men must have meat to help keep them "the best-led fighting men in the world." Our fighting Allies must have meat for strength, health and morale. Then, too, all of us on the "home front" need the nutrients found in meat—its proteins, B vitamins, and minerals.

Of the world's record 24 billion pounds of meat America will produce in 1943, our Government will need 6 1/2 billion pounds. The supply of meat available for civilian consumption, after the requirements of our Army, our Navy and our Allies are met, will be 3 1/2 billion pounds less than the abnormal demand due to the increased buying power of the public.

It is for this reason that our Government asks everyone to "Share the Meat"—beef, pork, veal, lamb and mutton—and to limit themselves voluntarily to 2 1/2 pounds weekly for each member of the family over 12 years of age, 1 1/2 pounds weekly for children from 6 to 12 years of age, and 3/4 pound for younger children, old people and other light meat eaters.

Help Win the War
Self-discipline by American civilians—staying within the allowances set—will help win the war. Actually 2 1/2 pounds of meat per week is but little less than the average American consumed during 1939.

Some Meats Not Rationed
Under the voluntary rationing plan, there are a number of good nutritious meats which are not limited.

For example, you will be able to buy plenty of such important, nutritious meats as hearts, livers, kidneys, sweetbreads, ox joints, pork feet, or tongue, and others, as well as all poultry. And if you have ever eaten a delicious baked heart, stuffed with tasty dressing; a liver saute; liver and dumplings or a kidney stew, you realize there are endless possibilities for using these meats to supplement the week's menu and stretch your fresh and cured meat allowance.

Meat Stretchers
There are many interesting ways by which you can stretch your meat and serve delicious, wholesome meals every day. I hope to give you many suggestions in the days to come. No resourceful homemaker need see her family lack meat-eating pleasure or all the nourishing food they need.

To the people in England, China,

Facts About Our Government's "Share the Meat" Campaign

America grew great on the spirit of sharing. Now, every home-maker in America has an opportunity to serve her country by cooperating with the Government's voluntary "Share the Meat" program

Russia and in the homes of our enemies, the everyday meals you serve would be sumptuous feasts.

"SHARE THE MEAT"
It is imperative that the American people begin to restrict themselves at once, for this reason:

Since October first, dealers—including your own—and public eating places have been restricted to approximately 20% less meat than they received during this same period last year.

The American Way

Your Government is depending upon you to be fair—to conduct your own purchases and use of meat so that your neighbors and friends can have their portion, too. This is the patriotic thing to do. Of course, should the Government decide to ration meat by the use of coupon books or otherwise, your purchases will be regulated.

Under the voluntary "Share the Meat" plan, if meat is eaten away from home, that amount should be deducted from home purchases.

Note: If you have not been using as much meat as the voluntary plan allows, there is nothing you need do. It is only those who have been accustomed to more than 2 1/2 pounds weekly who are asked to "Share the Meat."

Will You Do It?
Will you serve your country and cooperate in the "Share the Meat" plan in your home—voluntarily—beginning now? Will you do this so that all your friends and neighbors—and the families of those who are employed at heavy work in armament factories, may share, alike with you? I am sure you will.

Note: My special wartime recipes and "Share the Meat" menus show how to make the most of your meat allowance. They will appear weekly in this newspaper. They are designed to help you to give your family all the health benefits and eating pleasure that meat supplies. Nothing can take the place of meat on the American table. And, remember, nothing can take the place of Wilson's Certified Meats.

Gallup Poll Hits Bullseye On Election, Returns Indicate

Special Release From American Institute of Public Opinion.
PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 4.—On the basis of virtually complete returns from New York state, the Institute scored a perfect bullseye in predicting the Dewey vote in New York City, and came within one-half of 1 per cent of the Dewey vote for the state as a whole. This duplicates the feat of 1938 when the Institute called the Dewey-Lehman governorship race within one-half of 1 per cent.

On Monday the Institute predicted that Dewey would receive 39 per cent in New York City and complete returns show that he received exactly 39 per cent.

Institute Forecast.
The Institute forecast a total state vote of 53 per cent for Dewey and virtually complete returns indicate that this will be within one-half of 1 per cent. This accuracy is extraordinary in comparison to the normal statistical range of error of 4 per cent.

On Monday the Institute predicted the Republicans would elect governors in most of the populous states outside the south. On the basis of present returns Republicans are sweeping these gubernatorial contests from coast to coast. The outstanding feature of the election is the phenomenally low turnout of voters. The Associated Press forecast a vote of 34,000,000, while the Institute predicted only 30,000,000. Present returns indicate that only about 26,000,000 voted. This represents only 43 per cent of the eligible voters of the nation and less than one-half of the total vote cast in 1940. With the exception of 1930, that is the lowest turnout since 1926.

Light Voting.
The light vote delivered by political machines in metropolitan areas was a great factor in decreased Democratic votes. Also contributing was the fact that some 5,000,000 men are under arms.

On the basis of an expected turnout of 30,000,000 the Institute estimated before the election that the Republicans would receive 48 per cent of the total two-party vote cast for congressional candidates. Returns to date show that the 4,000,000 drop in the expected vote resulted in an underestimation of the extent of the Republican upsurge by at least 2 per cent.

Returns so far, plus the phenomenally low turnout indicate that it is statistically possible for the Republicans to elect approximately one-half of the members of the house.

Result of Town Election Hinges on Soldier Vote

RUNNEMEDE, N. J., Nov. 4.—(AP)—Johnny Doughboy will have the final word on who's to be the next mayor of this Camden county town with a population of 2,835.

With Republican Jack Muggleworth leading his Democratic opponent, Harry Williams, by one vote—549 to 548—the final result will not be known until several absentee ballots from registered voters now stationed in Army camps in the United States are tabulated.

The Wrong Attitude

Heads of those three farm organizations who claim to represent the farmers of the nation, at Washington, were rather badly out of line when, in their recommendations in regard to farm labor shortage, they referred to "misdirected efforts" of government agencies to fasten "far-reaching bureaucratic controls and restrictions" on farmers and farm workers. Said the trio:

"Under the guise of the war effort a social revolution is being perpetrated upon the American people. We are convinced that unless these policies are immediately abandoned, we face a disastrous shortage of food."

Such changes constitute nothing more nor less than an example of that type of encouragement to disunity which can easily disrupt and wreck the national war program. For it is calculated to sow seeds of distrust and dissension and to drive a wedge between farmers and other workers. It is a typical example of class blindness to the national emergency and of the placing of the interests of one group over the safety of the entire nation.

No one denies the shortage of farm labor constitutes a serious crisis. Food is essential and the production of food stuffs must not only be maintained, it must be increased. A nation at war requires greater quantities of food, while we must, in addition, ship ever growing amounts of food to allies whose own production has been hampered by the war.

And farm labor is growing scarcer. The chief cause for this scarcity, however, is the lure of high wages in industry, which is a constant temptation to rural workers to desert the farms for the cities.

It is unfair and unjust to blame the situation upon the call of selective service for men to serve in the Army. After all, the handling of that draft has been in the hands of local draft boards. They make the decisions and it can scarcely be credited that any local board has stripped its own community of workers needed for so essential a task as food production on the farms.

The leaders of organizations which claim to represent the farmers of the nation can serve well by co-operating and by suggesting reasonable means to solve the problem of farm labor shortage. When, however, they indulge in spiteful attacks upon the national war administration, they are not only doing disservice to the very people they are supposed to represent, but they are starting something which may develop into nothing less than sabotage of national unity in the war.

Give 'Em Credit

There has, perhaps, been too slight recognition of the wartime service being performed by the Civil Air Patrol. It is, therefore, gratifying that the visit to Atlanta of Major Earl Johnson, national head of the CAP, should emphasize this activity to Atlantans, at least. The Civil Air Patrol, a group of civilian pilots who fly their own planes, are engaged in extensive patrol of the Atlantic coast and in many other valuable services to the regular Army, Navy and Coast Guard organizations.

It is, of course, a wartime secret as to how many enemy submarines have been destroyed due to the alertness of the CAP. Nor can there be hint as to the many miles they daily fly on patrol.

But it is known that these volunteers, serving solely because of devotion to their country, have formed a by no means inconsiderable factor in the growingly successful defense of our long coastlines and the waters adjacent thereto.

Let us, therefore, when in the future we think of the glory that so rightfully belongs to the Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard and the Maritime Service, remember too the Civil Air Patrol, that is doing a grand job, quietly and without publicity fanfare.

Kill That Amendment

For the sake of America's chances of victory in battle, for the sake of every man in the armed forces and, most of all, for the sake of the younger men, those of 18 and 19 who will soon be made eligible for selective service, the congress should defeat the O'Daniel amendment to the bill extending the selective service age limits.

That amendment provides that youths of 18 and 19, drafted into the Army, may not be sent into combat overseas for the first year of their Army service. It has been opposed by all men of military experience, yet the senate voted for it, adding it has a rider to the new draft bill. It is expected to come up in the lower house this week.

In the first place it is fantastic, almost criminal, that men unfamiliar with the organization of the Army or with the possible exigencies of war, such as the average congressmen, should tie the hands of experienced and trained Army leaders. If congress does not trust those charged with the organization and direction of our Army, how can the general public feel confidence in those same men? And enactment of this amendment undoubtedly betrays a degree of such mistrust. For it tells, in effect, the Army chieftains that congress knows better than do they how to train and organize, how to fight an army.

Secondly, passage of the amendment would impose tremendous and unnecessary burdens of organization and administration upon the already sore-pressed army administrators. It would mean that none of the young draftees of 18 and 19 could be placed in army organizations now in existence. Special divisions and special training camps would have to be created to provide for them.

For it would be utterly impossible to train a division and then, when the time came that division was needed overseas, to have to weed out all men in it below 20. Any army organization, be it division, regiment, battalion, company or platoon is, for modern warfare, trained as a team. The men in it must work in closest co-operation with the others. They must know what each will do and must co-ordinate as carefully and accurately as a well coached football squad or baseball nine.

Furthermore, it would be unfair to the younger men themselves and would expose them to unnecessary dangers. For such young men, while possessing the enthusiasm and the quick nervous reactions of youth—extremely valuable assets for the soldier—require the presence of older men beside them, to provide that experience and that steadiness which can curb the overrecklessness of youth.

There need be no fear that our Army leaders will send a single soldier into battle with less training than can be given. Modern warfare demands the highly trained fighting man, the specialist. Our Army chieftains may be trusted to know this and to provide it as fully as possible.

But to forbid, by law, that soldiers of any age can or cannot be sent into battle as the commanding officers direct, is to hamstring discipline, to handicap strategy and to place an intolerable burden upon the men charged with the task of creating an American Army that can and will crush any enemy, anywhere.

Congress will place an indefensible handicap upon our war effort if it does not defeat this O'Daniel amendment.

Slaves to the Slaughter

A recent news report tells how German occupation authorities in Holland have started conscripting Dutchmen for army service.

A few weeks ago the Germans made all males in Luxembourg, another of the smaller conquered nations of Europe, subject to the same sort of conscription.

It is not difficult to imagine the thoughts and feelings of unfortunate Dutchmen and Luxembourgeois who must wear the uniform of that hated enemy which, less than three years ago, raped their countries and made them vassal states of the most cruel power in history.

Nor will these conscripted slaves prove soldiers of any value to the Germans. For they will be facing their friends and, allegedly, fighting for their nation's mortal foe.

No, they won't fight. They will simply be marched into the zone of fire, unable to help themselves, to be shot down as fresh, unwilling sacrifices on the altar of the German Moloch.

TAXES AND THE LITTLE FELLOW. (From The Albany Herald.) Do you make more than $624 a year? If so, you might as well begin right now figuring on ways and means of paying more taxes to help win the war.

The new tax bill, which now is law, provides for individual income rates ranging from 10 per cent on the first dollar of taxable income to 88 per cent at the top.

This is achieved by a normal tax of 6 per cent, to which is added a graduated surtax ranging from 13 to 82 per cent.

In addition to that, the "Victory" tax is 5 per cent on individual incomes in excess of $624 a year, or $12 weekly.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

OUR "GOOD WILL" STATUS WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—One phase of the recent report by Wendell L. Willkie on his world tour continues to be a bore of contention in Washington official circles.

The former Republican Presidential nominee is being challenged on his statement that the United States is losing its "reservoir of good will" throughout the world and ought to do something about it.

Just what we are losing a part of our accumulated stock of good will, if we are, is a mystery to most officials. The United States, it is pointed out, is in the process of raising one of the greatest armies in the world. It will probably be the most modern and the best equipped when it is completed.

Already we have the biggest Navy in the world and we are in the course of duplicating its size. When completed it will not be a two-ocean Navy, but one of five-ocean proportions. As regards aircraft, we have adopted a program for turning out planes in quantities which the Axis nations have belittled as "fantastic." The figures are so enormous they simply don't believe we have the ability to deliver. Although we have not been in the war yet a year, we are already producing more planes than any other nation of the world.

All of this is being produced not alone for ourselves but for China, Russia, Britain and the other countries identified with the United Nations. Because of our greater resources and higher industrial capacity, we have made ourselves the arsenal of the democracies—the reservoir of arms from which the other nations associated with us may carry on the fight against the Axis.

FOODSTUFFS, TOO Moreover, we are supplying our Allies with foodstuffs to make up the deficiency resulting from war conditions.

China and Russia may be disappointed that we have not been able to live up to our commitments in all categories entirely. But we certainly have done as much as the exigencies of the war permitted. Naturally, we have considered our own position, our own needs, first of all.

None of this should be calculated to diminish our stock of good will throughout the Allied world, as Mr. Willkie says. If anything, it should increase the stock.

FIGHTING FOR SAME CAUSE After all, we are fighting for the same thing they are and they had been engaged in the conflict—all of them, excepting the Latin American republics—before we were drawn in.

As Senator Tydings of Maryland, has put it, "we will have made this contribution in a struggle which, while world-wide and threatening all nations, is certainly of greater and primary concern to the masses of the people in Allied foreign countries who compose this so-called reservoir of good will."

Mr. Willkie's criticism, therefore, seems to fall somewhat short of the mark. The things we are doing, the enormous war burdens we are assuming for our share in the war effort, are designed to do anything but create ill will among our Allies. The very contrary should be true.

TOO IDEALISTIC? Another criticism heard of the Willkie speech is that it dealt with too much of the idealistic side of the war: extension of the four freedoms to all nations.

We are concerned with the four freedoms, which, as President Roosevelt has since reiterated, were intended to apply to the people of Asia as well as to the people of the world. But our chief concern is defeating the criminals who launched the world upon its present blood bath.

We did not go into the war to preserve the four freedoms. If we had our entry would have been made long before. We are in the war for self-preservation—forced against our will by a treacherous attack that caught us completely off base. We are in the war because Germany and Japan willed it this way.

VICTORY COMES FIRST What Mr. Willkie was probably referring to mostly in his assertion that we are losing some of the good will we have built up in the past among the peoples of the Far East is our failure to take a more positive stand in the fight between Indian leaders and Great Britain over the sovereignty of India.

That is a question to come up after the war, not while it is going on. We may sympathize with the Indians in their desire for full freedom of action in the management of their own national affairs, but we do not do so to the point of asking this as a price for their collaboration. It is up to them to aid in the victory before demanding a part of the spoils.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Quite a Suggestion.

Am in receipt of a letter, written on the stationery of a hotel in Americus, Ga., but signed by J. M. Salmon, of Dallas, Texas. The letter contains what seems to me to be a worth-while suggestion.

Hence this morning's column will catch the eye of someone in position to take up the idea and carry it through to the proper place for discussion and, maybe, adoption. That proper place, of course, is the congress of the United States.

Mr. Salmon quotes a statement in a German publication, published in Berlin. It is in reference to the export of German books to America. After mentioning that, naturally, during the first World War there was no export of German books to this country whatsoever, it speaks of increases in the book export trade in following years and attributes it to the fact that more than 400,000 Germans emigrated. Most of them to this country, though many to other lands in the Americas.

Mr. Salmon points out that if, of these Germans, each propagated at the rate of four children to the couple—and the Germans are a prolific race—that means 1,600,000 new Germans, either immigrants or first-generation native born, over here since the last war. And he quite logically concludes that the nearly all the Fifth Columnists, Bundists and others who have caused so much trouble of recent years, are of this group.

What Of The Future?

After pointing out that these Germans by emigration do not their portion of bearing the cost of the war that Germany instigated, he arrives at the crux of his thought. What will happen after this war is over? Will another crowd of Germans seek to create homes in other lands? If so, what type of folks will they be?

There is the rub. After all is said and done, it is the German people who are responsible for this war. There is no logic in pretending a little group of Nazi party leaders are solely to blame. After all it was the German people as a whole who accepted, and followed, that leadership. And don't forget, during the years the war has gone favorably for Germany, there has been nothing but satisfaction in Germany. No word of sympathy for the hundreds of thousands of innocents of other peoples and other lands, slaughtered by the German armies and Gestapo, has been heard.

But, when the Germans are defeated, then you'll hear about a lot of "good Germans." They'll be thrust forward as the defensive screen against the retribution all Germans know they deserve.

And we must never forget that the generations which have grown up during the years of Hitlerism, have been thoroughly indoctrinated with the hateful ideas found in Mein Kampf and in the many speeches of Hitler and other Nazi big shots. The older Nazis have, even, followed Hitler since 1921. Those who have grown up under the tutelage of Mein Kampf have been taught to scoff at God and religion, at all the decencies of honorable humanity. They sneer at the very idea of freedom and would set civilization back by many centuries.

Will We Admit Them?

Will we, then, admit such people, even under quota limitations, to our country after the war is over? Salmon thinks we should not, and I am inclined to agree with him.

Mr. Salmon proposes a method by which all Germans could be excluded from the United States after the war. He points out that this war is the first in all our history in which any other nation has formally declared war on us. So he suggests the enactment of a law reading something like this: "No national of any nation that has declared war on the United States of America shall be permitted to enter the United States during a period of 25 years, beginning with the date of the declaration of war against us." Further, such nations should not be permitted to maintain embassies or consulates in this country for a like period.

That would keep out the Nazi educated, the Nazi minded Germans. It would, likewise, keep out the Japs. Which will be quite satisfactory.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Monday, November 5, 1917:

"Rio Janeiro, Brazil, Nov. 4.—All the measures recommended to the congress by President Braz as reprisals against German aggressions have been agreed to by the committee of the chamber of deputies."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Saturday, November 5, 1892:

"Never was there a more touching funeral in Atlanta than the one which drew into the First Methodist church yesterday afternoon the sorrowing friends of Judge John Collier."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Strike At Hospital NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—On October 31 received a carbon copy of a letter from Dr. A. E. Bennett, of Omaha, to a third person relating his experience with a strike at the University of Minneapolis hospital. The strikers, he said, were building service workers.

The letter said:

"I was called October 4 as a consulting neurologist to —, Minn., where I examined a woman critically ill with a serious brain disorder which necessitated an emergency brain operation of very delicate nature in order to save her life. We took her by ambulance 180 miles to Minneapolis, expecting to admit her to the University hospital. The surgeon selected met us and was ready and anxious to help the patient, but we were unable to get the patient admitted because of the strike."

"Because of the nature of the operation, it could not be performed successfully in any other hospital in Minneapolis or St. Paul. In her desperate condition we were then required to take her by ambulance to the Mayo clinic at Rochester. This meant a delay of 24 hours before obtaining proper care which should have been accomplished in six hours. It may very well have cost this patient her life."

"Verification of these facts may be obtained by calling Dr. H. C. McPheeters, 63 South Ninth street, Minneapolis."

"This situation makes one wonder how much the American public is going to stand from haughty labor organizations before calling a halt. It seems to me that striking a hospital in order to obtain union recognition, thus causing unnecessary suffering to ill patients and endangering life, is about the last straw."

Wrote For Verification There is a little time lag in my correspondence, but precisely I wrote to Dr. McPheeters for his version of the case.

Dr. McPheeters' reply is at hand today. This is what he says:

"The facts related in your letter (meaning the carbon copy of Dr. Bennett's letter which was sent to him) are true and accurate."

"The patient did go to the Mayo Clinic. They made all tests possible and many that could have been avoided and finally at the end of six days came to the same conclusion that Dr. Bennett did. They did the operation just as Dr. Bennett urged."

"At the operation they found that she did have the malignant tumor of the brain and that nothing could be done. She did not survive the operation. "Statistics prove that she had a 50-50 chance of the tumor being a simple hemorrhage in a brain cyst and this could be removed, with a complete recovery. It was for this purpose that the operation was advised by Dr. Bennett and later done by the Mayo Clinic. "I had a conference with Governor Harold Stassen the next day after the patient was here. I reported the entire situation to him and he finally was able to intervene and get the strike settled. Up to the time they had not permitted him to help at all. "It seems to us that strikes like this against the hospitals when the lives of patients are at stake should not be permitted, by legislation."

Doesn't Alter Fact The fact that the patient was doomed, as ascertained by the Mayo Clinic, would not have been known at the time of her arrival at the Minneapolis hospital and surely will not be permitted to confuse the case or abate the enormity of the blockade. Though the unfortunate woman could not get well, the fact remains that in her stricken condition she was required to travel still farther when she had already covered 180 miles. If any further comment is desired, roll your own.

Word Stories

By W. Worthington Wells. Grantland Rice, who is frequently referred to as the dean of American sports writers, described a rookie shortstop as, "A UBIQUITOUS infielder."

U B I Q U I T O U S Ubiquitous is an adjective pronounced u-BIG-uh-lous, with the accent on the second syllable like (bik). The third syllable (ui) is pronounced like (wi) with a short (i). It is not a difficult word to pronounce.

Ubiquitous is most frequently used when referring to those friends or acquaintances who seem to be everywhere at the same time, often with humorous exaggeration. The humorous application of ubiquitous seems to be the preferred usage.

Omnipresent also means being everywhere at the same time, but it is correctly used in connection with and characterizes the relation of God to his creatures. Omnipresent denotes the presence of the Divine Character everywhere at the same time, while ubiquitous means that a person seems to be everywhere at the same time.

Omnipresent was used recently in describing the spontaneous reception and response to a nationwide radio broadcast, explaining how it was heard by many people in many places at the same time.

Only Today Is Yours The day is yours to use or waste. Then spend it not in useless haste. But stop and think, and meditate. Some love to serve—why hesitate.

Live and love each single day. And cease to think of yesterday. Learn to love, then learn to live. For all we have is what we give.

The day is yours to win or lose. For he that saves it cannot choose. The little rose that buds today. May bloom for you, when far away.

—W. A. ROPER.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

ELECTION RETURNS Before going into any subject in which emotions are likely to play a part, it is well to establish a firm base from which to operate. In considering the rather strong Republican strength shown in Tuesday's election, two important facts must be kept in mind.

One is that it was an off-year election. The second, and most important, is that in every off-year, or mid-term election since 1902, with the single exception of 1934, the party in power has lost an average of 42 seats.

This year, and at this writing, it appears the Republicans may gain at least 42 and may possibly gain more. This year there were many factors which played a part.

The people do not yet realize that sacrifice is a part of war. Or, rather, let us say they realize it but they still do not like it and they know who has imposed it.

Gasoline rationing, fuel oil rationing, automobile tires impossible to get, sugar, coffee, tea and other cheap and usually plentiful items are under control.

There is a feeling, held by large numbers of people, that union labor has too much power with this government.

There is a feeling on the part of the white-collar workers that they have been discriminated against and that everyone, save the worker in a defense plant, is getting an unfair and unreasonable break.

There are the new taxes, the surprise at Pearl Harbor, the war losses.

All these things work against the government.

It is not, in my opinion, indicative of any great trend, but it obviously registers a protest against some phases of our economic situation and our conduct of the war.

When one considers it calmly, it cannot be argued this was in any sense a giant swing of the pendulum. Had there been a feeling for repudiation there was much more for it to feed upon. There was a swing. How big it was may not yet be said. It was not much more than the average swing since 1902.

A BUSINESSMAN SAYS I talked with a businessman, who said:

"You put it into words. During the Harding-Coolidge era the pendulum swung very far. We know it swung too far the wrong way. "In 1932 it began a swing the other way. It had begun to look as if that swing was going to be too far. "Now the pendulum has swung back—just a little—but enough to assure us that it is swinging. You put it into words. "He had put them as well as anyone could."

That is one great thing about this country and its politics. It is not now possible to determine whether the swing was indicative of a desertion from the Democratic party principles, or merited a few paragraphs back.

It may well have been noticed that some changes in policies are desired.

It is a fact that for more than a year Franklin D. Roosevelt has had little to do with politics. He had little connection with politics in this campaign.

He could not refuse, of course, to say something in behalf of his old friend, George Norris. But all along the White House knew Norris was doomed. He did seek to have James Mead nominated in New York. He failed. He then announced he would vote for Wendell Willkie backed into his endorsement of Dewey. Willkie waited even longer than the President to make his announcement. The plain truth is that Roosevelt has not sought to have any great influence in the results of this election.

The equally plain truth is that for more than a year the administration has neglected entirely its close connection and ties with the states and their politics.

Time was when the Office of Government Reports kept a finger on the pulse in each state. The office no longer exists and for a year the administration has paid no attention to state politics. The great enemies of Mr. Roosevelt will not admit as much. But it is true.

IN NEW YORK New York elected Thomas Dewey by a plurality of about 600,000.

It is very likely, according to newspapermen with whom I talked in New York last Saturday, that Jim Mead, had Farley chosen him instead of Bennett, could have defeated Dewey. Dewey's election was conceded weeks ago.

There was never any enthusiasm for Bennett. Only the party regulars voted for him.

Many Democrats, who would have gone with Mead, didn't vote at all. The third candidate, whose total vote would not have closed the gap, would not have been in the race. It would have been a clean-cut Mead-Dewey issue and the extra enthusiasm would have put Mead over. This was the newspaper opinion.

As it is, the Democrats are out of office, but Jim Farley retains the chairmanship of the state party organization, even though the squad of Willkie detests him. The feeling is mutual.

This Mead-Dewey New York delegation will be hostile to any Roosevelt candidate in 1944 when the national convention is held. Roosevelt has built up no man to follow him. It is extremely doubtful if he wants a fourth term. He would not take it unless there was a unanimous demand. New York will prevent that.

Dewey now is the favorite for 1944.

Wendell Willkie detests him. The feeling is mutual. The good year 1944 might be a good year for a coalition of liberal Republicans and Democrats to defeat the old-line Republicans represented by Dewey.

Nobody Has Found a Substitute

For Concentrated and Over-

whelming Power

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

A Washington correspondent recently reported with apparent glee that all work had stopped on a 45,000-ton battleship, and in all probability no more such ships would be built during the war.

Congress and brass hats have been able to correct some of their costly mistakes; but if this proves to be a blunder, it may be fatal. You remember when two British battleships sailed north from Singapore to intercept a Jap convoy. If they had reached it they might have changed the course of history. But they were sunk by Jap torpedo planes, and that easy victory seemed to prove the battleship obsolete.

That was only half of the story, however, and is wholly misleading if the other half is untold.

A few months later, 15 of our torpedo planes, manned by our best fliers, intercepted and attacked a great armada of Jap battleships, carriers, cruisers, destroyers and transports.

Not one of them lived to reach its target, and only one man of the squadron survived to tell the story.

Why the difference? Did our men have less skill or slower planes? Did they make easy

Despite war, rationed sugar, fat, women in slacks and an increase in the number of bicyclists who can never decide which side of the street they prefer, I believe this world is growing better, in some ways.

This is not a hastily formed opinion nor is it based on recent developments. The improvement began years ago and shows no signs of retrogression. The state of war has little or nothing to do with the situation.

A small group of fortunate souls—or people—were gathered a few weeks ago at the home of a friend. Our hosts were middle aged and full of the joy of life and a couple of martinis.

After dinner—a good one, with plenty of chicken, cream gravy to go with the hot biscuits, though I could never make them come out even—was over we adjourned to the living room.

There was a piano there. A handsome piano, slightly marred by cigarette burns. I think a wise hostess should put two dozen ash trays on top of her piano, or an asbestos cover. Or retain the services of a husky bouncer from a midtown bar who could hurl a thoughtless guest into outer darkness.

I ventured to comment on the fine appearance of the piano and its make—one of the finest.

Worse than that, I asked the hostess to play something for us. I hit the jackpot that time. She said she didn't play. She invited me to play. I told her I could not play the finest line of Beethoven or Chopin she ever heard, but I'd caught my right hand in a door and couldn't do a composer justice. So we switched the conversation to the difficulty of buying a good steak.

No Child Prodigy

Over in the corner my hostess confided to me that they'd bought the piano—which was nearly paid for—in the hope that her eldest daughter, now away at a fashionable school, would become a Paderewski, but she hadn't taken sufficient interest. She had turned her attention to water colors. Which was too bad, because a water color outfit messes up the whole house. While a piano, except for the monthly installment—a daily dusting, is by no means a nuisance.

It is needless to say I was vastly relieved that the daughter of the house was not there to play—with her own interpretation—the Second Hungarian Rhapsody of Liszt or even Paderewski's Grand March, a favorite of my youth. So we had no piano music. I have slight regard for conventions, but to sneak away to the kitchen while the daughter of the house is slaying a Chopin nocturne is not done in the best circles, I am informed.

What? No Recitations?

So somebody turned on the radio, to a program which was good.

And, brooding in my corner, I thought of the social evenings I had suffered years ago. The days when the young daughter of the house had passed through a course of elocution. I think they called it "expression" in later years, but no change of name would lure me back.

Those were the days when, after a game of flinch or authors and lemonade, the 12-year-old daughter of the house would be called upon to recite.

Yes, ladies and gentlemen, the world is showing some improvement. I haven't heard a recitation in 20 years, having avoided school commencement weeks as I would shun a smallpox epidemic.

Maybe you wouldn't believe it, but there was a time when no social evening was complete unless a small daughter was urged by a guest (perhaps prompted by a fond mamma) to "recite."

Rarely was the remarkable son of the household urged to recite. The male animal retained some innate idea of right or wrong. He ducked out when the company came, after getting his share of ice cream in the kitchen, and was heard of no more. Thank heaven! But the daughter would consent (reluctantly, she tried to make it appear). She would stand right out there in the middle of the room and do "The Wreck of the Hesperus" or "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight." And, in the dying years of elocution, "Lasca" or "Gunga Din."

The worst of it was that in those days the kitchen was barred to men and even if we'd reached that haven there'd have been nothing there to relieve the situation. So we had to sit and take it.

The phonograph, with its records of great artists in great music, the radio, with its 90 per cent of crap and hokey, may be responsible for chasing out the child pianist and the infant elocutionist. If they have accomplished nothing more, I take off my hat to both of them. At least, they can be turned off with a simple twist of the wrists. But try to tune out a child prodigy!

Singer, DAR Clash Again On Use of Hall

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Marian Anderson, Negro singer, and the Daughters of the American Revolution, today disagreed again over plans for an appearance in the organization's Constitution Hall.

The singer last month informed the DAR she would sing at a war benefit concert in the hall—from which she was barred in 1939—provided the management made no attempt to segregate the audience on the basis of color, and on condition that she be allowed the use of the hall on future occasions.

The executive committee of the DAR today rejected her offer, and rejected these conditions. Fred E. Hand, managing director of the hall, wrote the singer's manager that "no appearance of any artist can ever be considered as a precedent for future engagements in Constitution Hall are concerned."

DAR officers in explaining the 1939 refusal of use of the hall to the singer said that the date in question had been filled previously. The situation resulted in a dispute over DAR policies and the resignation of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt as a member of the organization.

BUILDERS OF GEORGIA. Samuel Spencer was born March 2, 1847, at Columbus, Ga., and died November 29, 1906, at Lawyer's, Va.

After attending the common schools of Columbus until he was 15 years old, he entered the Georgia Military Institute at Marietta. The next year, though but 16 years of age, he enlisted in the Confederate Army as a private in the Nelsons Rangers, an independent company of cavalry. His first service under this command was scout and outpost duty near Vicksburg. He served later under General N. B. Forrest, the famous cavalry commander, and under General Hood in Atlanta and Nashville. He was honorably discharged when General Johnston's Army surrendered in April, 1865.

He entered the junior class in the University of Georgia, graduating in 1867 with first honor. In the autumn of that year he entered the University of Virginia, where he took a special course of study in civil engineering, graduating at the head of his class in 1869.

Must Sacrifice Or Be Slaves, Maverick Says

WPB Official Arrives Here for State Municipal Group's Parley.

By HERMAN HANCOCK.

Priorities in the future must be measured by how many Axis soldiers can be slain by the improvement. Maury Maverick, chief of the Bureau of Government Requirements for WPB, said yesterday on his arrival to speak tonight at the annual banquet of the two-day convention of the Georgia Municipal Association, which opens this morning at the Ansley hotel.

"We're in a war which makes the Battle of Atlanta only a surface disturbance," Maverick, known nationally now as the "No Man from Texas," he said.

"Anything which does not contribute to hastening the end of the war is out. Our entire national energy must be dedicated to winning the war. Our only concern should be how many Japs, Germans and Italians any improvement will kill. If it will contribute to that, priorities should be allowed. We are on a war diet and on war economy now."

Private Economy. He also warned private economy is undergoing the greatest changes in history as Americans become more conscious of the ruthlessness of the enemies they face.

"We must make personal sacrifices or become slaves," he added. "There is no alternative."

If President Roosevelt was looking for a "no man"—that is, one who can say "no" with convincing finality—he found one in Maverick, former congressman from Texas and one of the New Deal's staunchest supporters while he served in congress.

The local government requirements boss has had his ups and downs in politics. He formerly served as mayor of his home town, San Antonio, was defeated for congress and then was called to Washington to tell governors, mayors, county commissioners and others what can and cannot be done during the war period.

He greeted Mayor Hartsfield yesterday with a jocular statement that "Atlanta is showing much improvement since you are mayor again."

"Don't mention that, I don't have to run again for two years," Hartsfield replied.

Problem of Cities. Mayor Charles L. Bowden, of Macon, president of the Municipal Association, will open the convention at 10 o'clock this morning. Problems of cities growing out of the war and the association's legislative program in the 1943 Georgia assembly will be given major consideration.

Mayor Hartsfield will deliver the address of welcome. Highlights of the morning program will be addresses by Governor-elect Ellis Arnall and Bowden, and reports on the association's activities by Zach Arnold, secretary, and B. Graham West, treasurer.

dent, will lead a round-table discussion on "Municipal War Problems." Representatives of various federal agencies will discuss such topics as "Priorities Program of Association," "Civilian Defense Responsibilities of Cities," "OPA Relationship With Local Governments."

Mayor Hartsfield invited county commissioners from Fulton, DeKalb and Cobb counties, mayors of Decatur, Roswell, Alpharetta, Fairburn, Palmetto, East Point, College Park, Hapeville, and Marietta and other officials to attend a luncheon he will give for Maverick at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

Maverick was accompanied to Atlanta by M. G. Bardwell, his executive assistant. A delegation headed by Tobe Etheridge, assistant director of WPB in Atlanta, and Marvin Cox, director of information for the local office, met Maverick at the airport.

He went immediately on an inspection tour of the Bell bomber plant and other Atlanta defense developments.

Berlin Radio Prepares Nazis For Bad News

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—(AP)—The Berlin radio apparently began preparing the German people tonight for news of the British break-through in Egypt by stressing the "tremendous masses of men and material employed by the British," and Marshal Rommel's supply difficulties.

"Competent quarters" in Berlin were quoted as saying "local breaches" were inevitable because of the numerical superiority of the British, and in another broadcast heard by CBS the announcer said:

"Unfortunately there is no land bridge between the European and African continents. All supplies and reinforcements for Rommel's army must go by sea. It is no exaggeration to say that no British offensive in Egypt would have any hope of success if a land bridge existed between the European and African continents."

The Berlin announcer overlooked the Caucasian land bridge between the two continents—held by the Russians. That is another story.

Mr. Spencer was married to Miss Mousie Vivian Benning. Three children were born to this union, Hepry, Vernon and Vivian.

When Mr. Spencer was killed in the tragic accident at Lawyer's, in 1906, the employees of the Southern Railway System, 30,000 by actual record, participated in raising a fund with which the magnificent monument in his honor was erected in the plaza in front of the Atlanta Terminal station. I hope you will pause some day when you are passing the monument and note its grandeur of beauty and the sublime inscription. He was a great builder of Georgia.

Pulse of Public

The Constitution invites expression of opinion by its readers. This column is open for that purpose. All communications must be signed and all are subject to editing for conservation of space. Brevity makes argument effective and impels attention.

WORLD MAGNA CARTA MUST FOLLOW WAR

Editor, Constitution: The League of Nations of Woodrow Wilson's time was only a platonic gesture toward world peace and brotherhood. It was permeated with numerical inequalities. Therefore, it failed to function as a confederated palladium, which was intended for all liberty-loving peoples. It was conceived and written in haste and without proper representation of all nations. It was certain to fail ignominiously, and it did become a fiasco, and one nation after another began to repudiate its philosophy, and its platonic ideals of world democracy.

Today, throughout the world, nation after nation is dubious as to what will be their status when the present holocaust is concluded, and peace reigns again. It is nothing but right that any nation should know why it is making a "vicarious sacrifice on the sanguinary fields of Armageddon."

When the Statesmen of Sagacity again sit down together at the conference table, there should be one goal, one intention; and that should be a world charter, represented by all nations; not an Atlantic Charter, but a Magna Carta of all races, creeds and religion. Then, and only then, will the highway of peace be unobstructed to those who have an abiding faith in freedom and democratic ideals.

There can never be an entente cordiale among the nations of the world unless all are truly represented in an areopagus of justice and good will toward mankind.

Greed will never effect peace; insatiable ambition will never put an end to wars, neither will international relations ever function in harmony, so long as a few dictate the principles under which peace-loving peoples desire to live and let live. There must be representation de facto and de jure before nations can arrive at a permanent rapprochement of peace and the ultimate abolition of war and its myriad of attendant evils. In hoc, signo vinces!

Famed Barnsley 'Dream Castle' Auctioned Off for $25,000

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. KINGSTON, Ga., Nov. 4.—Hordes of antique hunters braved cold winds today to bid on the famed Barnsley "dream castle" treasures and the 1,700-acre plantation tract that finally went to G. C. Phillips, of Birmingham, and I. J. Scott, of Opelika, Ala., for $25,000.

The two buyers already were making plans to restore the huge plantation and its famous gardens after the war. In the meantime, the new owners will start mining operations to tap rich bauxite and manganese deposits so vitally needed in the war effort.

Sale of the property and hair-locks climaxed a century-long struggle by the Barnsley family to maintain the "dream castle" built by Godfrey Barnsley in the early 1830's. Barnsley came to Bartow county from Savannah, bringing with him 1,000 slaves.

The plantation was divided into 11 tracts as the bidding got under way before Auctioneer Tom Dozier. Scott bid in three tracts containing the mineral deposits, Phillips bid in the gardens and houses, including 171 acres, and other bids raised the total to $24,500.

Then Scott and Phillips entered a joint bid for $25,000.

The first item on the block was the famed Marie Antoinette clock, which sold for $215 to Joe Mahan, a student at the University of Georgia. Other heirlooms followed in rapid succession—mounted deer horns, rum bottles, wine bottles, pictures, exquisite glassware, priceless chairs, etc. Total antique sales for the day were $2,500.

One of the bidders was Mrs. Julia Saylor Pauls, of Chicago, a great-granddaughter of Godfrey Barnsley, who recalled that her brother, Preston Saylor, was accused of shooting another brother, Harry, in the old mansion. Preston Saylor now is serving a sentence for murder at Tattall prison.

An imported wine vase went to Miss Gertrude Whitworth, of Fort Payne, Ala., for $25; prized perfume bottles said to have been the property of Marie Antoinette, sold for $135 to Lee Garner, of Marietta; Joe McCutcheon, of Ellijay, paid $200 for a gold French clock.

A beautiful inlaid table cost Paul Lumpkin, of Cartersville, $350, and a three-piece imported silver tea service sold for $50.

The remaining antiques will be auctioned off at a final sale.

By helping to keep long distance telephone lines clear for war calls, you help speed war production. War calls are crowding telephone lines—especially the "long haul" lines which are the most heavily loaded with war business. The greater the distance you talk, the greater the likelihood of delaying vital war calls. To keep telephone lines clear for our armed forces, war industries and civilian defense agencies, is our job here at home.

We cannot add new lines because materials are more urgently needed to equip our fighters. Therefore, to make more room on crowded long distance lines for important war business, telephone users are urged to make only absolutely essential calls and to be brief in all conversations.

War takes no holiday, so please do not use "long distance" to exchange Thanksgiving greetings.

Long distance lines to these cities are especially crowded with war calls. Make only really urgent calls to these points or to places in these general localities.

All in the Game

By JACK TROY

Poetic Praise

We knew that Georgia and Tech couldn't keep on pacing the nation in football without someone bursting forth in poetic praise of one or the other.

Roy M. Richards and John Cooper got together after the Georgia-Alabama game—at the Sigma Chi house over in Athens town—and composed a poem modeled after "Casey at the Bat."

We think you'll like it—

THE FIREBALL AT BAT.

By Roy Richards and John Cooper.

It looked extremely rocky for the Georgia club that day—
The score stood ten to nothing with a quarter left to play—
Then Alabama fumbled to the wonderment of all—
And the much applauded Sinkwich took his place behind the ball—

And when he passed to Davis for twenty yards or more—
The Georgia fans let up a yell, "We've GOT to have that score!"

Next came a pass to Poschner across the double stripe—
There was joy in every rooster's heart—
We knew that team was right—

And when the roar had lifted, Young Leo trotted in—
And when his mighty task was done, the score was seven to ten.

The kick-off was a wobbly one down to the twenty-five—
When Alabama punted, Flying Frankie hit his stride—
He threw a string of passes, a few fell incomplete—
But then another bombshell caught "Bama" sound asleep—

The Bulldogs had surged on and on to finally take the lead—
And Costa kicked his extra point—a perfect well-done deed.

"Bama" tried a group of plays, and then was forced to pass—
But "Handy Andy" scooped it up and made that final dash—
The reading on the scoreboard before the final gun—
Says poor ole "Bama" ten—The Mighty Georgia twenty-one.

In Athens joys are happy, where gridiron heroes ride—
There is no joy in "Bama"—We beat that Crimson Tide.

Quite an Honor

W. O. Cheney, principal of Tech High, sends us a clipping of a piece from this column, quoting Grantland Rice, as follows:

"Georgia has at least two All-Americans," Rice was told. "Sinkwich and Poschner. And it probably is the first time in history that two boys from the same school ever were linked together for the honor. That is, two boys from the same high school—Cheney High, of Youngstown, Ohio."

Professor Cheney quotes:

"In 1918 two Tech High players were picked on Eckersall's All-America team while the boys were still in high school."

"Sidney Sault (substitute center).

"Harvey McCord, tackle."

"Of course, Mr. E. could not explain this pick."

Fun for Rice

Rice got quite a kick out of his trip back to the deep south, where he was raised. As soon as Georgia had defeated Alabama, supporters within shouting distance took Rice to task for not picking Sinkwich as an All-American.

It was music in Granny's ears—as pretty to him as the bell-tones of a July or a Walker hound; soul-stirring as beagles on a rabbit's trail—in full cry across a distant hillside.

As Harry Wismer, Blue network's ace, said about it afterwards—

"I have never felt such enthusiasm at a football game; the air is charged."

Harry ought to come down and see us oftener.

He is a fine fellow, a great announcer, and he gets a real kick-out of southern football spirit.

We'd like to see him in a leading bowl. He deserves an invitation.

Granny Rice will be back the first chance he gets. Could be for Georgia and Tech.

After all, a fellow seldom goes against his raising. Rice went to Vanderbilt, served for a time as sports editor of a local afternoon paper.

If he doesn't give the south what appears to be ample credit, it's only because he leans over backwards trying to be fair to all sections.

Tulsa, Georgia in Duel For Total Offense Lead

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Those impersonal judges—the game statistics—vote the Tulsa Golden Hurricane as the nation's top football team, both in offense and defense.

Tulsa, in winning six straight games and scoring 296 points while keeping its goal line uncrossed, has averaged better than 422 yards by rushing and passing, while limiting its opposition to about 90 yards a game—less than the length of the field.

Georgia, rolling on the mighty impetus of Frankie Sinkwich's passing and running, retained second position.

Tulsa and Georgia are moving down the opposition at a pace never before recorded so late in the season. While the Hurricanes make 422.3 yards a game, Georgia averages 412.9 yards.

Ohio State's pace is 394.3 yards a game while Missouri's is 392.4 and fifth-place Texas' 373.1.

Tulsa, stopping its foes with 90.5 yards of gain a game, is followed on the defensive tabulation by Detroit (with one game unreported) 117.9 yards, Duquesne 117.9 yards, William and Mary 125.5 yards and Boston College 127.2 yards.

The Golden Hurricanes built up a great share of their record on passing and pass defense. They have averaged 207.3 yards through the air followed by Columbia, 202.5 yards; Georgia, 194.7 yards; Maryland (with one game unreported) 161.6 yards, and Southern Methodist, 138.8 yards.

Tulsa limited its foes to 26.5 yards per game through the air and has intercepted more passes than its opponents have completed, 14 to 13. Harvard is second in pass defense by yielding only 34.3 yards a game, followed by Georgia Navy 44.3, Manhattan 46.3 and Yale and Bucknell tied at 47.6.

Hardin-Simmons boasts the best rushing average with 324.6 yards a game, while Boston College has the most impregnable defense against its foes' rushing, yielding 27.2 yards a game.

Rams To Play W. Fulton at Russell Field

Marist Travels to Columbus for Clash With Jordan High Tonight.

By BERT PRATHER.

Richardson High and West Fulton, a pair of up and coming N. G. I. C. elevens, will clash at 8 o'clock tonight at Russell Field in what promises to be a wide open contest with plenty of fancy running in prospect.

Both these teams are well stocked with good running and passing backs with the West Fulton Owls possibly having a slight edge in number. The Rams, playing their first season under Coach Harlan Harris, rely chiefly on the passing of Grady Akin, the pass catching of Blackstone and the plunging of Creel. This trio has figured prominently in most of the scores registered by the Rams this season.

GOOD YEAR.

Richardson, during the last year, has had a very successful year. The expert handling of a small squad by Coach Harris, is enjoying one of its best seasons. The College Park school has won three, lost three and tied one. The biggest achievement thus far was the defeat of a favored Commercial eleven by 18 to 6.

Although beaten by a fairly wide margin in their game with Decatur last week, the Owls played one of their best games. They were constantly threatening, but plays went wrong at inopportune times and the Decatur boys were able to capitalize on most of these mistakes. Coach Harris said he would be satisfied if his boys played as well tonight against the battling Rams. The West Fulton backfield, sparked by Walt Crawford, is one of the best in the N. G. I. C. and should be plenty tough for the Ram forward wall to handle.

Coach Lawrence Whalen's Marist eleven is the only other local team slated for action tonight. The Cadets will travel to Columbus for a skirmish with Jordan High. Marist has won five of its eight starts and should register another win tonight over a Jordan team which has been handicapped by injuries most of the season.

FRIDAY GAMES.

Seven games involving local elevens are slated for Friday. Boys' High and Tech High will hit the road. The Purples put their undefeated record on the line at Columbus against Columbus High, while Tech High journeys to Savannah for a tussle with strong Savannah High. Coach R. L. Bowser's Russell Wildcats, who were handed their first setback of the season last Friday night in Griffin, will perform away again Friday, meeting Gainesville High at Gainesville under the lights.

Four good games are slated for local fields Friday. Heading the program will be the Decatur-Griffin tussle at Decatur. Others will pit North Fulton's Bulldogs against Commercial at Ponce de Leon, Fulton vs. Hapeville at Russell, and G. M. A. against Starke, of Montgomery, at College Park. This latter tussle will be played in the afternoon starting at 3 o'clock.

St. Hagen, a badly sprained ankle and Kuhn, suffering from an injured chest.

Others on the ailing list include Clint Castleberry, who suffered a lick on a shoulder which was hurt in high school, Eddie Prokop, who went to a hospital with a throbbing molar last night, Ed Ryckle, who has a bad knee; Buster Beall, with a leg injury; Jack Hancock, also a hurt knee, and Al Faulkner, another member of the Kneecap Klan.

With all these boys haunting the training room, it's little wonder that Trainer Bond had no time to think of his 17th anniversary. Realizing that Kentucky's line is one of the best in the country, Dodd worked long and hard on the Tech passing attack before the scrimmage and the results were far from pleasing.

The boys did pretty well in the dummy drill, but when the knocking started, receivers developed bad cases of "butter-fingeritis," dropping balls which were right in their hands.

HARDEST HIT.

Hardest hit positions by injured are the blocking back and tail back posts. Little Jack Faulkner handled the first string blocking back job in both scrimmages this week. His brother, Al, probably will be ready to go, but Stein and Kuhn are doubtful—and they are the best men at the job.

If Prokop's tooth has to be extracted, and Castleberry's shoulder continues troublesome, the Jackets will be sorely handicapped at the all-important tailback spot where Bobby Sheldon will have to carry practically the entire load.

The Techs looked pretty good on defense against Kentucky plays in the drill when Jack Jordan and Harvey Hardy doing the best jobs. Otherwise, there was little for Dodd to smile about.

Looks like Mrs. Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie have just about accomplished what Hitler and Mussolini started out to do.

They've divided the world between them.

Wendell has been ringing doorbells in about 17 languages. Eleanor's last subscription to House and Fireside just missed her in Iceland.

Wendell pulled no punches in his last speech. And that makes him the gymnasium champ.

THE WILDEST OF THE WILDCATS—Big Charley Kuhn will be one lad Georgia Tech's crippled Yellow Jackets will have to watch closely if they are to get by the strong Kentucky eleven at Grant Field here Saturday. The halfback is not only a fine runner, but a brilliant kicker. His six touchdowns and 16 conversion points this year give him 52 points and second place in the Southeastern Conference scoring race, which Georgia's Sinkwich leads with 66 counters. Kuhn tallied two touchdowns and three points after the 'Cats thumped George Washington University, 27-6, Saturday.

Blocking Backs Stein, Kuhn on Sidelines as Tech Prepares for Tough 'Cats.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Trainer Claude Dodd celebrated his seventeenth wedding anniversary yesterday by working several hours overtime trying to get Georgia Tech's football squad in some kind of shape to play Kentucky here Saturday.

The Yellow Jackets are in their worst physical condition of the season for one of their most important games. As Backfield Coach Bobby Dodd sent his boys through their final scrimmage of the week no less than nine boys off the first and second strings watched from the sidelines, suffering from injuries which ranged from bad knees to out-of-place shoulders.

Of the nine, three have little chance to see much service against the tough Wildcats. Jim Luck definitely is out, unless he goes in for one play to punt. Wilbur Stein and Jim Kuhn, the first and second string blocking backs, may not be ready, and if they are, will not be at top form.

Mrs. W. F. Darby captured the annual Metropolitan Women's Golf Association championship yesterday at Druid Hills when she defeated Mrs. Warren Pollard, 5-4, in a hard-fought match.

Mrs. Darby was representing the East Lake Club, while the runner-up is a Druid Hills member. The victory netted Mrs. Darby a war bond and possession of the championship trophy. Prizes were also awarded to Mrs. Pollard and the two semi-finalists, Mrs. Henry Hubbard and Mrs. Claude Swinney. Mrs. Swinney was also awarded a prize for winning the qualifying medal with a 91.

In the championship consolation finals Miss Peggy Gude defeated Mrs. H. F. Wiedeman, 3-1. Mrs. A. M. Dimmock captured first place in the first flight with a 5-and-3 in over Mrs. S. E. Sakin, while the first flight consolation title went to Mrs. J. H. Galbraith who downed Mrs. A. C. Baird, 6 and 5.

Since this was the big windup to a successful season and the girls still had plenty of nice trophies to distribute, they staged a low net losers' tournament. In this event the following were prize winners: Mrs. W. B. Smith, Mrs. Deurt Hooker, Mrs. D. C. Chamberlain, Mrs. Charles Downman, Mrs. Henry Hubbard, Mrs. W. H. Robertson, Mrs. E. B. Cary, Mrs. L. H. Beck and Mrs. Charles Swann. A special prize was also presented to Mrs. W. L. Boege, a newcomer to the association.

The election of officers was also held yesterday with the following being elected to guide the association next season: Mrs. A. J. Kaiser, president; Mrs. J. H. Galbraith, vice president; Miss Peggy Gude, secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. Claude Swinney, chairman of handicaps. This marks the fourth straight year that Mrs. A. J. Kaiser has headed the organization.

Baylor Picked To Turn Back Texas Steers Williamson Likes Go-phere, L. S. U., Maroons, S. M. U.

Williamson Likes Go-phere, L. S. U., Maroons, S. M. U.

By PAUL WILLIAMS.

There are no big, outstanding games this week. Most of the leaders in the various sections should win comfortably, according to the Williamson ratings.

Probably one of the most interesting games of the weekend will be the Baylor Bears' clash with the University of Texas at Austin. While the Longhorns will be as polite as possible to their guests, they will not hesitate to push them all over the lot if necessary. Texas is rated at 93.1 and Baylor at 93.8. Last year Baylor spoiled one of the greatest records in football by tying the University of Texas at Waco. On the slim margin in the difference of the ratings the System leans toward Baylor again this year.

Pennsylvania entertains Navy at Philadelphia, and the Army meets Notre Dame in New York city. If the two service teams rise to the heights there could be upsets here; but ride with the ratings for Penn and Notre Dame.

Indiana will journey to Minneapolis as the underdog against Minnesota. Remember the System warned that Illinois might upset Minnesota. Take Minnesota here, but don't be surprised at an upset.

Among the leading close interest games are: St. Mary's of California over Duquesne in Pittsburgh, Michigan over Harvard in Ann Arbor, Washington State over Michigan in Pullman and Louisiana State over Fordham in New York.

In the east the System picks Brown over Holy Cross, provided Bob Margarita is in there pitching. They have the same rating, 88.4. Texas Yale over Cornell in a close one; Dartmouth over Princeton (same rating, 88.5); Syracuse over Penn State, also close; Rutgers over Lafayette, the same; Dickinson over Western Maryland.

In the federal government's statistical south—from Maryland to the Rio Grande and throwing in Oklahoma for good measure—the following games are close to very close: Furman over Citadel, S. M. U. over Texas A. & M. (surprising?), Mississippi State over Tulane and V. M. I. over Wake Forest (providing presently injured Joe Huha plays) and the midlands debatable games include: Drake over Iowa State Teachers, Washington U. of St. Louis over Kansas, Missouri over Furman, Great Lakes over Purdue, St. Benedict over Southwestern Kansas, Wichita over Emporia Teachers, of Kansas, and Wooster over Denison.

THE BOWL GAMES

What about the bowl games for January 1, 1943? At the moment the Rose, Sugar and Orange feel fairly certain they will be able to offer their annual show. There certainly is enough material on hand, with Georgia Tech and Alabama from the south and Boston College and Penn from the north—enough material for at least two big shows.

But who is to say how quickly and how heavily the draft will begin to work? Or who can figure what the government will do about transportation by that date?

If there is a Rose Bowl game—and there may be—will any eastern or southern squad be allowed to make the long trip across the continent or will one of the Naval Cadet teams be used against the Pacific Conference champion? There is sure to be a snarl here because by that date most of the present Pre-Flight squads will be scattered all over the map at different flying schools.

If U. C. L. A., for example, should lose its lead, against the western coast, what opposing team would be available at fairly close range? Or would the field be wide open from any section, with the receipts going to some war fund?

Complications

Just at present the Sugar Bowl has its vision focussed on Boston College from the north and either Georgia or Georgia Tech from the south. What if Boston College or Pennsylvania or the winner of the Georgia-Georgia Tech game is invited to the Rose Bowl? How many players would be left by January 1 on any of these teams?

The entire Bowl situation is badly complicated, especially when you consider the draft and transportation problems. Don't overlook the fact that the great majority of all college football players already have enlisted in the Army, Navy, Air Force or Marines, subject to call at the end of this season. In many cases entire squads of 30 or 35 men have enrolled.

One way to keep the Bowl schedule alive might be to play for a war fund—Red Cross or USO or Army or Navy Relief. But it must be remembered that the War and Navy Departments would not let the Annapolis and West Point teams play in Philadelphia, where they might easily have raised from $350,000 to $400,000 for some Army or Navy war chest. They will get little or nothing from the Annapolis game.

Looking Ahead

After all, January, 1943, is a long way off. Too many things can happen.

If the war isn't going any too well, drastic moves will be made in a hurry. Certainly nothing will be allowed to interfere in any way with the conduct of the war.

I have talked with well-known Army and Navy officers, and their advice is to wait—and

Jury Returns Insanity Verdict Against Kadens

'Three-State Crime Wave' Will Be Committed to Institution.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Irwin Kadens, described by the Federal Bureau of Investigation as a "three-state crime wave," was adjudged insane today and was ordered by Chief Justice John A. Scarboro, of the criminal court, to be committed to an institution for the criminally insane.

The insanity verdict was returned by a jury of six men and six women a few hours after two court-appointed psychiatrists had reported Kadens was mentally deranged and unable to distinguish between right and wrong. The report was made after Kadens had been called for trial on a charge of robbery of a loan company.

Following the verdict, three charges of robbery and one of assault pending against Kadens were set aside with leave to reinstate.

Kadens, who deserted from the Army at Camp Grant, Ill., last July 14, was captured in Chicago October 19 while holding up a currency exchange.

When the jury read its verdict—after only five minutes of deliberation—Kadens rose and cried out:

"I protest. I want to be tried on a death penalty offense and I want to be my own lawyer."

Employment Offices Make Staff Changes

Appointment of Holland R. Nelson, of LaGrange, as manager of the U. S. Employment Service office at Savannah, succeeding H. A. Miller, was announced yesterday by State Director T. H. Quigley.

Melton has been manager of the LaGrange office for four years. His transfer to Savannah is effective immediately. Quigley said Miller had left to enter the Army.

Succeeding Melton at LaGrange will be Silas Kelly, manager of the Newnan office. Quigley said the Newnan office would be closed temporarily because not enough personnel is available to keep it open.

The wartime demands of our offices at Savannah and Brunswick are so great," he said, "that we have to have full staffs there. Unfortunately we can't do that and keep the Newnan office open, too."

29,000 MIGRATE. PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Nearly 29,000 persons migrated to the United States during the fiscal year ending June 30—about half the 1940-41 total—the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization announced today. The immigrants came from all corners of a war-shadowed world.

Norris Terms Defeat '40-Year Repudiation'

'It's All Over Now,' Says Tearful Senator of Nebraska.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—(AP)—"It's all over now and I'm at the end of the road," 81-year-old Senator Norris, of Nebraska, said today, calling his defeat for re-election "a repudiation of 40 years of service."

With tears in his eyes, he told reporters: "I have done my best to repudiate wrong and evil in governmental affairs. But I have to admit I have utterly failed."

"I don't know now why. I wasn't to blame."

"The most important thing from my viewpoint is that righteousness has been crucified and the people I love have condemned the things I held most sacred."

"Personally, I find it a repudiation of 40 years of service. God knows I've tried to do the job. I know I have been honest. I've tried to place politics on a higher plane."

Norris, a veteran Independent who was defeated by Republican Nominee Kenneth Wherry, added he thought "it was a hard, sad blow to my philosophy of government" and that it seemed to be of little importance that it came at a time "when I know and everyone knows I'll never get back in."

"The people," Norris continued, "had a perfect right to do what they did. I would defend them to the last drop of my blood in their right to exercise the privilege they have just exercised."

Asked whether he thought he could have won if he had gone to Nebraska sooner to campaign, the senator replied: "It probably would have helped some, but nothing that I did seemed to matter."

Berlin Eyes Gibraltar Moves

LONDON, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Reuters said the Berlin radio broadcast a DNB dispatch today that close attention was being paid in Berlin to "special ship movements in the harbor at Gibraltar."

This followed a Vichy broadcast of a dispatch from La Linea, Spanish town at the Gibraltar border, asserting that several merchantmen carrying large contingents of American troops were anchored in Gibraltar harbor, together with a battleship, an aircraft carrier, 14 destroyers and 18 seaplanes.
